Victims Must Take Free Treatment.

U. S. Expert Aids Fight

Dr. Oliver C. Wenger of the United States health service confers with Chicago officials in the campaign against venereal diseases and assures the city it can conquer this plague. Details on page 9.

BY JOHN S. STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 2.—Denmark has the oldest and one of the most successful systems of controling syphilis and other venereal diseases in the world. The system dates from 1788, a time when the disease was hardly recognized by the scientific men of the day. It has been in operation since then with no change in principle, although, of course, methods of treatment and control have changed with the advance of knowledge.

The result is that today Denmark is more free from syphilis than any country in the world and it is able to boast that in recent years medical officials have traced no new cases which have not been imported.

Treatment in 1788 Primitive.

In 1788 a progressive medical officer in one of the counties of Jutland, alarmed by the growth of what was then known and is still known popularly as "the French disease," induced the governor to promulgate an ordinance making the notification and treatment of the disease compulsory. The treatment was then very primitive.

It was described to me as "mercury and isolation," but it showed such results that two years later the king extended the law to cover the whole of Denmark, which then included Norway and other parts of northern Europe. Since then Denmark has been waging an incessant war on venereal disease with varying success, but she is now convinced that she has won and that these scourges of mankind can be eliminated.

The essence of the Danish system is compulsion. It is pointed out that without compulsion no campaign to eradicate these diseases can be successful. One careless or criminal person can prove a source of infection to hundreds and in the interests of the community the freedom of a few must be sacrificed, even if they have only been unfortunate and have committed no crime.

Soldiers Were Infected.

The Danish system of combating venereal diseases was described to me by Dr. Johannes Frandsen, director of the national health service. So far as is known he said syphilis came into northern Europe some time in the sixteenth century. The Spanish soldiers who fought at Padua about 1500 were infected and they spread the disease to the French and Italians, who brought it north. From France it spread into the Scandinavian countries.

The records for the early days of Denmark's system are not quite clear. Only syphilis is mentioned and apparently gonorrhea was not recognized as a separate disease.

The first law compelled the patient who was found to have syphilis to accept treatment, which was provided free of charge, and to remain in isolation. It was soon found that isolation was impossible without hospitals and the first hospitals in Denmark were erected for the treatment and isolation of syphilis patients. In 1806 some of them became general hospitals and from this beginning sprang Denmark's magnificent system of free state hospitals.

King Supports System.

There is no essential difference between the system inaugurated by the old Jutland governor nearly 150 years ago and that of today, which has the enthusiastic support of King Christian X. A patient who is found suffering from one of the venereal diseases must be reported at once to the authorities. His physician informs him that he must submit to treatment until he is pronounced cured. That generally means that after the first series of treatments he is under observation for three years and subject to renewal of treatment if required. The doctor must inform him that he is entitled to free treatment either from him or in a hospital. It matters not if he is a millionaire or a pauper, he need not pay.

If the patient fails to appear for treatment, either at the public hospital or at his own doctor's office, he is

DAVID HAMMERS ZINTAK PLEA OF JUDICIAL IOU'S

Lashes Defense in Lively Session.

Two of the principal figures in the Zintak embezzlement trial testified yesterday before a jury in the Criminal court of Judge Benjamin P. Epstein. They were Frank V. Zintak himself, ousted clerk of the Superior court, who is charged with embezzling funds of his office, and Judge Joseph B. David, former chief justice of the Superior court, who has been named as one of the I. O. U. judges to whom Zintak advanced public funds during the payless pay day period of 1934-'35.

Judge David, who is a veteran of 20 years on the bench and is still there, was a prosecution rebuttal witness. He went on the stand, minus his official robes, and vigorously assailed testimony given earlier in the day by Zintak.

Judge David on the Stand.

The defendant had attempted to shift the blame for his shortage to the judges of the Superior court, who, he said, advised him that it was all right to use office funds for salary advances if he could replace them when called for.

Soon after Judge David settled himself in the witness chair it became apparent that he was no exception to the old truism of the legal fraternity that lawyers and judges make poor witnesses. He was voluble and emphatic. He tried to argue with the attorneys. He tried to direct the questioning and finally tried to make a speech. At last Judge Epstein whispered to him across the end of the bench and shook his head.

The diminutive judge was emphatic in his denials that he gave Zintak legal advice, that he borrowed funds of the office, or gave postdated checks, except on one occasion when one of his checks was held for a time. He was not allowed to explain this transaction, although he expressed a willingness to do so.

Passes Lie to Zintak.

Judge David in effect, court attachés said, passed the "lie" to Zintak, who prior to his indictment was a power in the dominant Cook county Democratic organization to which Judge David owes allegiance.

Although Judge David's name was mentioned last fall in the first trial before Judge Robert C. O'Connell, he did not go to court then to deny the testimony, which was to the effect that David had advised Zintak he could use the money, but without mention of any loan to the judge.

That trial ended in a disagreement on last Dec. 10 after the jury had wrangled 41 hours. The specific charge against Zintak was, then as now, the embezzlement of $10,500, although the former clerk also is accused of taking an additional $16,000.

A Jolt to Defense.

Judge David's appearance at the trial yesterday seemed to be somewhat of a jolt to the chubby, smooth-faced defendant and Defense Attorneys Benedict J. Short and George Guenther.

Judge David obviously wanted to do more explaining than the questions propounded to him by the state and defense lawyers called for. But the vigilant objections of Attorney Short prevented the judge from doing any talking except in direct answer to the questions propounded.

When the defense attorney would not allow the judge witness to "make a speech," as Attorney Short put it in his objection, Judge Davis started to tell Assistant State's Attorney Robert Wright how to ask the questions. He was stopped in the middle of his "directing" by another defense objection and he finally was called into a huddle with Judge Epstein.

Judge Epstein Disapproves.

The judge witness and the presiding judge, the latter in black robes and the former in a gray business suit, conferred over the end of the judicial dais. Judge Epstein could be seen shaking his head.

"The calm of the courtroom probably was a revelation to Judge David," remarked a bailif facetiously commenting on the fact that Judge David sat among the courtroom spectators nearly an hour without uttering a word while he waited to be called as a witness.

The wide divergence between Zintak's testimony and that given by

'Clear Me!' Cry of Mary Minter in Old Murder

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—With a dramatic demand that she either be indicted at once or exonerated, Mary Miles Minter, one of the screen's glamorous stars of fifteen years ago, today reopened speculation on the unsolved murder of William Desmond Taylor in 1922. In a series of rapid moves Miss Minter focussed attention of state and city investigators upon the mystery which resulted in a series of vicious scandals and wrecked several Hollywood careers, including her own.

Miss Minter, the late Mabel Normand, and many other beauties of the movie colony's jazz age figured in the investigations that followed the murder of Taylor, one of Hollywood's leading directors. He also was considered the most charming and eligible bachelor in the movies and half the stars he directed were reputed to be in love with him.

Two Loves Unrequited.

It is a matter of record that Miss Minter was in love with her director and that he was in love with Miss Normand, who supposedly was fond of him, but did not return his love.

Miss Normand was the last person—except the murderer—to see Taylor alive on the evening of Feb. 1, 1922. They had been chatting together while the director went through a stack of canceled checks, several of which had been forged by Edward F. Sands, the director's missing valet.

Miss Normand left the Taylor bungalow early. Her departure was seen by Faith Cole McLean, first wife of Douglas McLean. Then, shortly afterward, a man left the house—"a funny man who acted and walked like a woman and who had the shape of a woman," according to Mrs. McLean. Taylor was found in his study early the next morning, shot to death.

Initialed Nightgown Found.

In the investigation that followed, police launched a nation-wide search for Sands, who never was found. And as time went on detectives leaned more and more to the theory that Taylor had been murdered by a jealous woman. There were plenty of them in his life. There were stories that Miss Minter had been stunned by the accidental discovery of the director's love for Miss Normand.

In his bungalow was found a nightgown bearing the initials M. M. M. This was only one of many revelations. When Miss Minter's contract with Famous Players Lasky expired in December of 1922 it was not renewed and she left pictures for good.

The nightgown figured in the

ROOSEVELT FORBIDS KNEE BREECHES FOR DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—(AP)—President Roosevelt officially turned thumbs down on knee breeches, gold braid or other trick regalia in the United States diplomatic and consular service.

An executive order made public by the state department said:

"No person in the diplomatic service shall wear any uniform or official costume not previously authorized by congress. Consular officers are not authorized by law to wear any uniform, and the prohibition imposed by statute on diplomatic officers is extended to consular officers."

The prohibition is largely academic, because no diplomat or consul now affects a uniform, as far as is known.

JUGGLE BOOKS SO BERWYN COPS CAN RIDE TODAY

By transferring some figures from here to there on the books, Berwyn's aldermen transferred the city's police force last night from the sidewalk to squad cars. It was purely a matter of bookkeeping, and that's what the police were complaining about, for most of them were still hoofing it.

The police began complaining last Saturday. They said their four squad cars were all broken down and they couldn't get them fixed until previous repair bills were paid. Mayor Anton Janura said it was because Treasurer Matthew Berg wouldn't sign the check to pay the bill. Berg retorted that there was no money in the corporate fund.

Last night the aldermen transferred $800 from the water fund to the corporate fund. That fixed up the police, on paper. Alderman Edward Moysey said they'd be fixed up in cars, today.

Horner Hints He'll Support 'Pegged Levy'

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Financing plans for Chicago's board of education and the consolidated park district were laid on Gov. Henry Horner's desk today and were well received. Indications were that after certain data had been supplied him, he would support the bills.

After a talk with James B. McCahey, president of the school board, who laid the proposed $45,000,000 "pegged levy" bill before him, the governor said:

"I want to help the schools. I have asked Mr. McCahey to furnish me with copies of the school board budgets for the last six years. If the figures seem justified, I will urge passage of the bill."

Payless February Inevitable.

Chicago's school teachers and other employés of the board have been paid to date, but regardless of how fast the legislature works, payless paydays cannot be averted for February. The pay rolls for Friday, the 5th, and Feb. 19 will not be met.

Following his talk with the governor, McCahey and the school board lawyers, Frank Righeimer and William H. Sexton, dined with Mr. Horner at the executive mansion.

"We hope," McCahey told reporters, "that the pegged levy bill, which represents a reduction of 4 million dollars below the 'peg' for 1936, can be passed and signed by the governor before Feb. 24, when it could be approved by the Chicago city council and the tax levy spread. We must wait 10 days after that for the levy to be published before we could sell tax anticipation warants."

Hope to Meet March 5 Pay Rolls.

Should the utmost speed be made, and all goes well with the bill, the school board hopes to meet its March 5 pay roll, although it probably would be a few days late.

Attorney Sexton talked with the governor in behalf of the 9 million dollar pegged levy bill for the Chicago park district. The governor asked that he be given figures showing the comparative expenses of the parks before and after consolidation. These will be furnished him by Milton E. Connelley, assistant secretary of the park district.

Both measures were introduced in the senate tonight by Harold G. Ward of Chicago, Mayor Edward Kelly's legislative spokesman. The school board bill was sent immediately to second reading; the park bill to the committee on parks and playgrounds.

'Mercy Death' Bill Drafted by Nebraskan

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—A bill to legalize the "mercy death" of adults with incurable ailments, introduced today in the Nebraska legislature, aroused a host of varied and opposing comments tonight.

Some believed its enactment would be a welcome surcease in painful, lingering deaths; some considered it shocking and tantamount to "legalizing murder," while others were of the opinion it had "come 25 years too soon."

The measure, believed the first of its kind in any state, was sponsored by Dr. Inez S. Philbrick, retired Lincoln physician and former instructor in women's sex education classes at the University of Nebraska where she was the only woman doctor ever to serve on the faculty. She is 71 years old and unmarried.

Offered by Lincoln Senator.

The bill was offered to Nebraska's one house legislature by Senator John H. Comstock of Lincoln as "a way out" for adults suffering from incurable diseases.

"The subject is of sufficient magnitude," he said, "when one stops to consider the multitude of painful, lingering deaths from incurable diseases, that I feel this legislature can well afford to listen to its discussion and consider it seriously."

The senators appeared loath to discuss the plan, however, and consequently it was given little attention.

Under terms of the euthanasia bill, district judges would appoint a three member commission—two doctors and a lawyer—to investigate any adult's application to be put to death. If the judge and committee members concur that it is advisable to invoke the law, the attending physician is authorized to administer euthanasia.

Doctor Sees Merit in Bill.

Passage of the act would require amendment of the Nebraska criminal statutes dealing with first and second degree murder, manslaughter, and some of the provisions governing the practice of medicine.

Most of the legislators were "not available for comment" on the unusual proposal, but Dr. A. L. Miller of Kimball, the house's only physician member and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, gave his view.

"I think the bill has merit," he said, "but I think it's twenty-five years too soon."

Dr. B. F. Bailey of Lincoln, chairman of the legislative committee of the Nebraska State Medical association for the last twenty years, termed the plan "against the law of God and man."

Ask Jail for Dog Poisoner.

The legislature also got a bill to prevent the killing of dogs.

Senator P. L. Cady of Fremont, a veterinarian, said the present Nebraska statutes making killing of certain animals a crime omits any reference to dogs.

His measure would make the killer of a dog valued at more than $35 subject to from one to three years imprisonment in the penitentiary. For killing a dog of less than $35 value the penalty would be a fine of from $5 to $100 or three months' imprisonment in the county jail. A dog poisoner would be subject to $100 fine or 30 days in jail.

'EXPECT TO DIE RESISTING,' MEN TELL GOVERNOR

Zero Hour in Tieup at 2 P. M. Today.

Ouster Order

High points in the injunction by Judge Gadola, ordering the ouster of Flint Fisher strikers will be found on page 2.

BY WILLIAM O'NEIL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Flint, Mich., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Three o'clock tomorrow afternoon is the zero hour which will decide the future course of the big General Motors strike. What happens at that time may also decide the fate of John L. Lewis' efforts through his rebel Committee for Industrial Organization to unionize the automotive industry.

In a comprehensive injunction order that appeared to plug all legal loopholes, Circuit Judge Paul Gadola today told the sitdown strikers holding the two Fisher body plants here to get out. He gave them twenty-four hours. The time ends at 3 p. m. [2 p. m. Chicago time] today.

Strikers Defy Order.

Soon after the court's order had been read to the men in the plants by Sherif Thomas W. Wolcott, the strikers in plant No. 2 wired defiance of the injunction to Gov. Frank Murphy. "We have decided to stay," they asserted.

"The sherif will have all the powers and force necessary to carry out the court's order," Judge Gadola said when he turned over the order for execution. "He can deputize 50,000 men if necessary."

"We have carried on a stay-in strike over a month in order to make General Motors corporation obey the law and engage in collective bargaining," the strikers wired the governor. "Our struggle is to maintain the American standard of living and to secure to us the right of collective bargaining free from discrimination, coercion, intimidation, and violence.

Claim Violations by G. M.

"General Motors has violated the laws and has shown its contempt for the President of the United States as well as yourself. The injunction issued today seeks to oust us and give General Motors corporation an advantage which it does not deserve.

"We have good reason to believe that General Motors is so armed to oust us that it will use force and violence to put us out.

"We feel it proper to recall to you the assurance you have given many times publicly that you would not permit force or violence to be used in ousting us from the plant. Unarmed as we are, the introduction of the militia, sherif, or police with murderous weapons will mean a blood bath of unarmed workers.

Call Officials G. M. Men.

"The police of the city of Flint belong to General Motors. The sherif of Genessee county belongs to General Motors. The judges of Genessee county belong to General Motors.

"Only yesterday the judge who issued this injunction said of you:

"'To hell with Gov. Murphy.'

"It remains to be seen whether or not the governor of the state also belongs to General Motors.

Decide to Stay Inside.

"Governor, we have decided to stay in the plant. We have no illusions about the sacrifices this decision will entail. We fully expect that if a violent effort is made to oust us many of us will be killed, and we take this means of making it known to our wives, to our children, to the people of the state of Michigan and of the country that if this result follows from this attempt to evict us you are the one who must be held responsible for our death. Signed,

"STAY-IN STRIKERS OF FISHER PLANT NO. 2."

Lewis Reported in Detroit.

Meanwhile Lewis was reported to have arrived in Detroit by plane and to be in conference there with Gov. Murphy. John Brophy, vice president of the C. I. O., said he had talked with the governor by phone and had been assured that "under no circumstances" would the state's military arm be used to "eject or assist in the ejection by force or violence" the men inside.

What effect the arrival of Lewis to take personal command of the strike may have was conjectural tonight. Lewis and William S. Knudsen earlier in the evening had given the first evidence of mutual desire for peace that has yet been manifested in the widespread struggle.

In Baltimore, on his way to Detroit, Lewis said that a "conference is the only way to settle a controversy unless it is desirable to await the exhaustion of one of the contestants, or until one adversary beats the other down." He intimated that he would be glad to enter such a conference.

Knudsen, almost as soon as the injunction ruling had been handed down, said General Motors is ready to open negotiations with the union the moment the strike-held plants are evacuated.

Expects Compliance.

"General Motors welcomes the decision of the Circuit court in Flint which upholds our position that the forceful occupation of our plants by the union is illegal," he declared. "We expect that the union will now demonstrate that it is a responsible organization, willing to abide by the law and to respect the rights of others, by peacefully accepting the decision of the court.

"As soon as the plants have been evacuated and restored to our possession we will commence negotiations with the union on the issues it raised with us in its letter Jan. 4. We will do all that lies in our power to make a prompt and honorable settlement so that production can be quickly resumed and the incomes of the hundreds of thousands of people who have been so adversely affected by this strike situation may be restored as soon as possible."

Copies of the injunction were signed by Judge Gadola and delivered to Sherif Wolcott at 5:30 this afternoon. An hour's argument concerning the wording of the court order was engaged in by Roy Brownell and Ralph E. Gault, attorneys for General Motors, and Larry Davidow, Lee Pressman, and Maurice Sugar, attorneys for the United Automobile Workers of America.

When Pressman asked if the sherif could use force in his treatment of the men in the plants, the point was quickly settled in the affirmative by Judge Gadola. He warned the union attorneys that "if this [sitdown strike] continues, the court will expand the injunction to take in all of the General Motors plants in the state."

Guard Officer Goes Along.

Sherif Wolcott was accompanied by Maj. Edward Carrier, 2d battalion, 125th infantry, when he went to Fisher plant No. 2, which is in the area under National Guard control.

The strikers had turned off all of the lights in the plant and had placed a huge sheet of steel across the lower half of the main doors. They at first refused to open the door until Maj. Carrier showed himself in the dim light and rapped on the glass panel. Sherif Wolcott was forced to read the order over the edge of the steel barricade. Three of the leaders of the strikers came to the door to hear him.

Maj. Carrier returned to guard headquarters and the sherif went to Plant No. 1 in the south end of town. This plant is not in the area under military control.

Striker guards at the plant gate refused at first to let the sherif in until he took off his gun. He replied that he "had never taken his gun off for any one and he didn't intend to begin now." The guards finally gave in and admitted him to the plant.

The injunction was read to a group of strikes just inside one of the doors. They listened in silence until he had finished and then gave him a sound booing. Boos and profanity greeted him from open windows as he left the plant.

"What will your next move be?" the sherif was asked.

Will Wait Until 3.

"The boys have until 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to leave the plants," Wolcott said. "We'll wait until then to see if any more steps need to be taken. Right now I'm going down and get my supper."

Restrictions against food being sent into the Chevrolet engine plant were lifted late this afternoon after union and military observers had sifted out six men in the plant who were not Chevrolet employés. The strikers inside the plant said at 6 o'clock that heat had been turned off.

"The question before the court is solely that of the right of the defendants [the union] to occupy the premises in question, and their right to picket," Judge Gadola said in his decision.

"The courts cannot adjust differences between employers and employés," he declared. "The defense has referred to the law of 1898 as being out of step with the mandate of 1936. By the latter I suppose they refer to the recent election. The court cannot legislate; the court must take the law as it is. If there is to be a change that is up to the legislature.

"The property question has been settled by the Supreme court."

Strikers "Former Employés.

The judge then cited a long list of cases in which it was held that an employé loses his right to possession of his employer's property when his status as an employé ceases. In the bill of complaint filed by General Motors the strikers were referred to as "former employés."

"The defendant says that the plaintiff did not come into court with clean hands," Judge Gadola said. "As I asked yesterday—do they contend that one wrong can be righted by another wrong?

Judge Gadola took up the subject of picketing, citing Michigan Supreme court decisions as declaring picketing of any nature illegal in this state.

"The court cannot take the 'mandate' of 1936, as expressed in the election," he concluded. "It must take the law."

The Gadola injunction differed in many material respects from the one issued by Circuit Judge Edward D. Black three days after the strike started and which was ignored by the men inside.

There never was any attempt to eject the men and the sherif said the injunction did not contain any order for him to do so. Today's injunction does, emphatically. The Gadola order also refers specifically to Fisher plants 1 and 2. Judge Black's order included all General Motors plants in Flint, though only the two Fisher factories then were affected.

Today's injunction sets a time limit. The Black order did not. Today's injunction provides a 15 million dollar penalty to be lodged against Martin, the union, all officers and board members, Flint local officers and executive committee, the defendants' lawyers, and all the sitters. It demands that the men leave without damaging any of the company equipment.

Picketing Prohibited.

Today's order prohibits any further trespass. Its provisions against picketing are all-embracing.

The earlier injunction plea was withdrawn after the union charged Judge Black was a General Motors stockholder and instituted impeachment proceedings.

At the conclusion of the court hearing Judge Gadola, in his chambers, explained that under Michigan law, the sherif could come before the court in case the strikers refuse to obey the order to evacuate.

The judge can then issue a writ ordering the sherif to bring the violators before the court, by force, if necssary.

If the sherif finds that his forces are not sufficient to do this, he can either deputize private citizens or call upon the National Guard. The sherif refused to say which he would do.

Six union men were arrested and the sound car in front of the Chevrolet plant was confiscated by National Guardsmen at noon today. The men were lodged in the county jail charged with "inciting to riot."

They are Frank Walentowski, Toledo, O.; Martin Bishop, Detroit; John Garrison, Arden Price, James Austin, and Frank Gallagher, all of Flint. They will be tried by civil authorities.

The guardsmen were in control of an area of one-half square mile. A score or so of pickets in front of the Chevrolet plant were not molested. Any one who wanted to could leave the area, but reëntry was denied to all except those with special military passes.

Residents in Difficulty.

Even residents whose homes were in the area had a difficult time getting home. One woman was forced to leave her car outside the military cordon and walk to her home.

Of some significance was the fact that guardsmen were occupying two "open" Chevrolet plants, but had made no attempt to enter the one held by sitdowners, nor the Fisher plant in the area.

The company made no attempt to reopen any of the plants this morning, as reëntry through the lines on the basis of a company badge would not have differentiated between Chevrolet employés who wanted to work and those who wanted to picket.

The Buick plant was working at partial load today, with 2,000 of its 16,000 employés back on the job for the second successive day.

A massmeeting of strikers at the union hall this afternoon was told by union leaders that the men in the Chevrolet plant would stay there until an agreement is reached with General Motors, "food or no food."

ABSTRACT OF DECISION OUSTING STRIKERS

Flint, Mich., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—The ruling of Judge Paul V. Gadola today that sitdown strikers must evacuate two Fisher body plants here included the following:

"This proceeding involves a simple legal question that would be of relatively little importance except to the litigants involved, other than that it is of great public interest because of the relationship existing between the parties litigant at the present time and as they affect the general public and welfare of all our people. The question involved is solely as to the right of the defendants to occupy the premises involved in this litigation described in the amended bill of complaint of the plaintif.

"It is proper that this matter should finally be brought before a court of competent jurisdiction for decision. If two individuals were in difference, the law would not permit them to take their grievance or wrongs in their own hands and attempt to redress them by their own actions. Because a great number of people are involved, there is no difference, and the courts are the proper forum to redress wrongs and protect rights.

"It is deplorable that in this country, and with the respect for law and order in our institutions that prevail, that it should become necessary to have conditions exist as they are. Courts cannot set up any processes or tribunals to adjust differences between an employer and an employé. That is a matter for the congress or the various state legislatures.

Praises English Setup.

"In passing, it might be well to remark that the English system has adopted means to have completely removed these controversies from direct action and place them under proper government supervision, with proper legal procedures and tribunals to settle and adjust differences. The Danish system that has been in operation for some time likewise provides means and methods of peaceable adjustment.

"This should be done in America and probably in the near future will be done.

"It must be remembered that both sides to any controversy should be required to submit their differences to the proper tribunal set up for the adjustment thereof. The courts, of course, have nothing to say relative to such procedures, as the courts can but interpret and enforce the laws as they find them. In doing this, the courts must take no sides in the controversy, but act fairly, impartially, and fearlessly in the enforcement of our laws, redress of wrongs, and protection of rights.

Law As It's Found.

"This court realizes, no matter how the court decides, that he will meet with condemnation from some of the involved groups or interested parties. The courts are a constitutional part of our government and must fearlessly function without thought of personal standing, or criticism, and this court will attempt to do that.

"At the outset of the argument on behalf of the defendants, counsel stated that we were now not operating under the laws of 1898, but were operating under the clear mandate of the people as expressed in 1936, probably referring to the election of 1936.

"This court has previously stated he must take the law as he finds the law, and he must interpret and follow that law. If there is to be a change in the laws, it is legislative function to make those changes, and the court perforce must follow the mandates of the legislature relative thereto, but the court cannot legislate, the court can but interpret and enforce.

"The question involved here as to the right of possession of the premises in question seems to have been clearly settled by the law through the Supreme court of our state."

Reads Law as Decided.

The judge then gave a long series of quotations from previous cases upholding the right of private property, the termination of an employé's right to remain in a place of business after his employment was ended, and restraining picketing.

"There are numerous other cases cited by the Supreme court of the state of Michigan based upon this same question, all holding in accordance with the decisions which I have read.

"This court cannot take the mandate of 1936. As expressed, this court must follow the law as established by the Supreme court of the state of Michigan.

"It therefore follows that the relief asked for by plaintifs in this action must be granted. The injunction shall be issued out of this court commanding the defendants that have appeared, and all defendants, and all persons operating through, under, or by virtue of any contact with these defendants, to evacuate the premises in question, and further that they shall be restrained from picketing the plants of the plaintif.

"This order further provides that the sherif of this county shall read the order of this court in the premises described to the parties therein, and that shall be sufficient notice of the order of the court to all parties involved. And further providing that the evacuation shall be done within 24 hours from this time."

The court's ruling was contained in a 5,000 word opinion, most of which cited the Michigan law and rulings referred to.

LEWIS OFF TO TAKE COMMAND OF AUTO STRIKE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—John L. Lewis, militant sponsor of the General Motors strike, left here on a late afternoon train today for Detroit, where, tomorrow, he will assume personal command of striking automobile workers in the latest crisis of the war between the company and its employés.

As he boarded a train for Detroit Lewis said he plans to launch a series of huge workers' meetings on his arrival at the strike front. The meetings will be held at Detroit, Lansing, and Flint for the purpose of presenting personally to the workers all phases of the dispute with General Motors.

Roosevelt Refuses Comment.

While Lewis prepared to leave the capital, President Roosevelt, at his semi-weekly press conference, declined to comment on the strike. He dismissed a question as to what the government could do toward settling the strike as too "iffy."

Asked whether he regarded the decision of a Michigan state court enjoining the sitdown strikers as "an enlightened" decision, he said he had no comment to make on the situation. In his last message to congress Mr. Roosevelt pleaded for "enlightened decisions" from the courts, particularly the United States Supreme court.

Lewis' decision to go to Michigan was sudden and unexpected. It was made before word reached here of the injunction granted General Motors corporation ordering the evacuation of two Fisher Body corporation plants at Flint, Mich., by approximately 1,000 sitdown strikers affiliated with the United Automobile Workers of America.

But it was learned that Lewis considered granting of the injunction inevitable and merely anticipated the court's decision.

Follows Phone Parley.

He declined to discuss his plans. He will confer with strike leaders when he reaches Michigan, he said, and would not reveal what program, if any, he has in mind at this time.

Announcement of the visit to the scene of the strike followed shortly upon a telephone conversation which Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins conducted with President Roosevelt. She denied that the President was about to intervene personally in the strike and said she merely acquainted him with all the latest developments.

SHOW RAPISTS QUICKLY FREED TO PREY AGAIN

Indict Rogers Park Moron for Attack on Girl.

Rapists freed from Joliet penitentiary in a ten year period served an average of only two years and eight months for their crimes. This revelation came yesterday as a true bill was voted against Maxwell Dowdell, a park district foreman, on charges of assault with intent to commit rape and taking indecent liberties with a Rogers Park girl 10 years old.

MRS. HARRIET M. ROBERTSON.

The disclosure that under Illinois laws many rapists are freed after they serve short sentences spurred the demand by Chicago citizens that sex criminals get punishment in proportion to their offenses. Indignation already was at a high point in Rogers Park over the Dowdell case.

Studies 254 Cases.

Ray M. Simpson, graduate student in psychology at Northwestern university, arrived at the average penalty of two years and eight months after he studied the cases of all of the 254 rapists turned loose on society from Joliet in a ten year period beginning with 1920.

Many persons guilty of sex crimes are never sent to the penitentiary at all. Mrs. Harriet M. Robertson, president of the Woman's Civic council, said yesterday that sex criminals too often are sent to institutions for the insane or feeble-minded. Later they are found not to be in those mental classifications and are released to prey on the public again.

"There should be a most careful psychiatric examination of sex criminals to prevent their release from mental institutions to which they never should have been committed," said Mrs. Robertson.

"We want sentences, real ones, too, instead of just a year in jail or a fine on a misdemeanor charge, when sex criminals come before judges of the Municipal court. These cases should be centered in one branch in which the judge, chosen for his fitness to deal with sex offenses, would sit more than one month before shifted to some other court."

Unsuspected as Moron.

Dowdell, who is 49 years old and lives at 6906 Lakewood avenue, gives point to the unsuspected dangers of the increasing moron menace. He was not a known degenerate, but a married man, the father of a daughter two years older than his victim.

The true bill was voted after Dowdell's young victim, along with a colored maid employed in the girl's home, and Capt. Charles Essig of the Rogers Park police were taken before the grand jury as witnesses by Samuel Papanek, assistant state's attorney, who is at the head of Prosecutor Courtney's new sex offense bureau. Dowdell was released last night in $7,500 bond, for which his brother, Charles, scheduled his home at 8047 South Peoria street.

Girl Identifies Attacker.

In Felony court earlier in the day Dowdell had been held to the grand jury. During his arraignment he was identified again by his victim and other witnesses as the man who had offered to help her search for $3 she had lost while on her way to a dancing school.

The penalty for taking indecent liberties is one to twenty years in prison and for assault with intent to commit rape, one to fourteen years. These are indeterminate sentences and the parole board decides how many years the prisoner must serve within the limits stated. The penalty for rape, however, is a definite term of any number of years from one to life, fixed by the convicting jury or by the judge if there is no jury. There is no parole in such conviction, but the time served may be reduced by good behavior.

Indignation in Rogers Park over the attack is to result in a massmeeting Friday night at the Rogers and Post hospital, 6970 North Clark street. The meeting has been called by Dr. Marjorie R. Nesbit to devise means of coöperating more closely with the Rogers Park police.

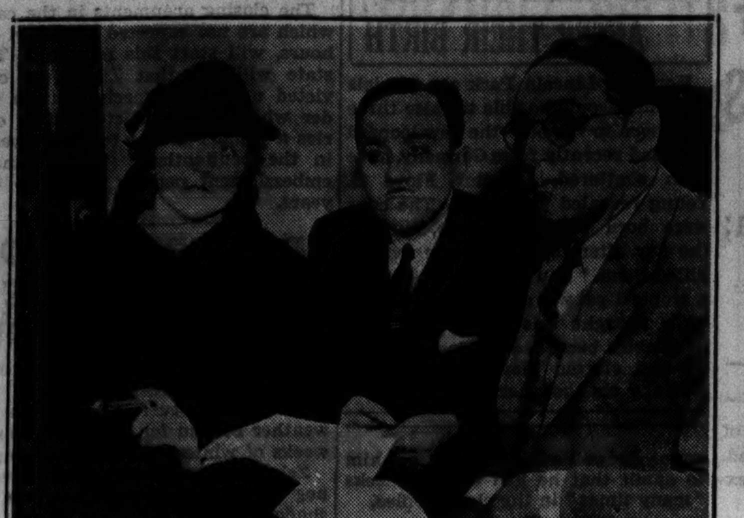
PRINCIPALS AND CLEWS IN REVIVED MURDER MYSTERY

Mary Miles Minter is shown here as she appeared when she was a screen star in 1920. She was supposed to have been in love with William Desmond Taylor, one of Hollywood's leading directors, at the time of his murder in 1922.



Miss Minter is shown here (left) as she appeared at the office of District Attorney Buron Fitts (right) in Los Angeles yesterday, when she demanded that she be prosecuted or completely exonerated in connection with the murder of Taylor. In the center is her attorney, Edwin Myers. After the interview Fitts declared the case would remain closed.

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Director Taylor (in typical pose of early film era) was considered the most charming and eligible bachelor in the movies at the time of his death. His real name was Deane-Tanner.

Among the slain director's effects, detectives seeking a clew to the mysterious murder (which has never been solved), found his watch and a locket (as above) containing a picture of the late Mabel Normand, another movie star of the era. That Taylor was in love with Miss Normand was known throughout the film colony.

VOTING MACHINES AND FILTRATION WEIGHED BY CLUB

Rotarians Ballot on Two Proposals.

Two questions of public interest have been placed before members of the Rotary club of Chicago this week by its civic committee for a post card vote. They are whether Chicago should install voting machines, and whether the club should recommend to Mayor Kelly the immediate construction of water filtration plants.

Accompanying the post card sent to each member were resolutions reciting the advantages of filtration and voting machines. In addition, there was included a digest of the chapter on the latter from Joesph P. Harris' "Election Administration in the United States," in which the arguments for and against the machines are given.

Advantages of Filtration.

"The only way to clarify the water and remove sediment, disease germs, bad tastes and odors," the filtration resolution reads, "is to filter it. The capital, amortization and operating costs of filtration would increase the cost to the domestic consumer only a few cents per thousand gallons and the pure, clear filtered water could still be delivered at less cost than in any other city of the world. The price now charged by Chicago for water is much lower than that charged by any other city of comparable size in the United States."

Universal installation of meters is an essential preliminary to filtration, the resolution continues, to eliminate costly waste in pumpage. Metering would result in improving the service to all consumers, the resolution contends, at no increased cost to property now paying the flat frontage rates.

On Voting Machines.

Arguments for and against voting machines are summed up in the digest as follows:

"The principal merits claimed for voting machines are accurate returns, reduction or elimination of many types of voting frauds, quick returns, secrecy, elimination of mistakes and spoiled ballots, avoidance of recounts, reduced costs of elections, and better election officers may be secured.

"The principal objections raised against the use of voting machines are they slow up the voting and cause voters to have to wait in line to vote.

Many voters object to their use, they are expensive to install and they are more costly to operate than paper ballots. Many voters lose their votes on the machines or vote for the wrong candidates, and they make split voting more difficult. They may not be used for proportional representation, and they have been abandoned by many communities."

"It is significant," the digest reads, "that the machines have never been retained if the voter is given his preference between voting on the machine and voting a paper ballot."

DRY REPEAL VOTED FOR ALABAMA OVER VETO OF GOVERNOR

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The Alabama legislature overrode a gubernatorial veto today and enacted a prohibition repealer which ended the state's 22 years of "bone dry" prohibition.

The county option state store liquor control bill will bring legal whisky into Alabama around April 1 in counties voting for repeal in a special election March 10. This action leaves Kansas the only bone dry state in the nation. Tennessee, Mississippi, Georgia, and Oklahoma ban hard liquor, but permit beer.

WOMAN LEAPS INTO ICY RIVER BUT IS SAVED

An elderly woman weighing about 300 pounds leaped into the Chicago river from the Madison street bridge last night. Melbourne T. Davis, who stood nearby, cast off his outer clothing and plunged after her among the ice cakes. Although nearly numb from cold, Davis clung to the woman until Bridgetenders Patrick Colhane and Michael Owens pulled them into a rowboat. Davis, a salesman at 149 North Wacker drive, revived after firemen wrapped him in blankets. The woman was taken to the County hospital, where she was identified as Mrs. Clara Petersen, 73 years old, 2930 Shakespeare avenue. In her clothing was a note reading: "This is not a case of insanity, but the problem of a broken hearted mother."

RUBBER WORKERS EJECT OFFICIAL, PLANT CLOSES

Akron, O., Feb. 3 [Wednesday].—(AP)—L. E. Judd, Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, public relations counsel, announced early today the concern's plant No. 2, employing 5,000 persons, was closed at midnight after a dispute in which C. C. Slusser, vice president in charge of production, forcibly was evicted by workers from the tire building department.

United Rubber Workers of America precipitated the controversy, Judd said, when they "told a fellow worker who apparently had failed to pay his union dues to get out."

Judd claimed the worker protested and Slusser and another company man escorted him back to the department, instructing shift workers either he or nobody would work.

"The men shoved the worker and the management representatives out of the department," Judd added.

Midnight shift workers were informed of complete suspension of operations in the unit when they reported for duty. Observers said 150 tire builders refused to vacate.

LYNCH ALABAMA YOUTH JAILED IN ATTACK ON GIRL

Headland, Ala., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—The bullet pierced body of Wes Johnson, colored farm youth accused of raping a white girl, was found hanging in a woods near here today a few hours after a group of armed men took him out of the jail at Abbeville, Ala.

Sherif Louis Corbett said about fifty men, who drove up in a cavalcade of twenty-five cars, held him and his father, Jailor J. N. Corbett, prisoners until Johnson's cell door was forced open.

BRITISH COLUMBIA TO INSURE 100,000 IN HEALTH PLAN

VICTORIA, B. C., Feb. 2.—(AP)—North America's first compulsory state health insurance program will go into effect in British Columbia on March 1. The plan, the health insurance commission stated today, is designed to restore the family physician "to his proper sphere."

The provincial commission announced the contemplated system of medical treatment and payment, and circularized all physicians and surgeons in British Columbia for coöperation. The plan contemplates that 100,000 wage earners, making less than $1,800 a year, will pay 2 per cent of their weekly wages into the health fund; their employers paying 1 per cent of their insurable weekly pay rolls.

The commission plans to set aside $5.50 a year for each insured person, to provide for payment of doctors' fees. The doctor would get $4; the remaining $1.50 would be divided as follows: Obstetrics, 35 cents; referred surgery, specialists and consultants, 65 cents; reserve fund for semi-annual distribution, 50 cents.

LUCKY ERNEST WINS 50C AND A PSYCHIATRIST

If you should suggest a wager to Ernest Delcourt, 20 years old, 937 West 59th street, perhaps it would be just as well to duck smartly. Ernest's last bet didn't turn out well, even though he won it.

Some days ago Ernest gave himself up to the Deering street police, announcing that he was wanted as a robber. After he had sobered up in a cell he chuckled that he did it to win a 50 cent bet with a chance drinking companion that he could parade at the police showup.

Obligingly, the police finger printed him and sent him to the showup, booked him on a charge of disorderly conduct, and yesterday took him before Judge J. M. Baude in the Boys' court, where he repeated his story of the bet. The judge ordered a mental examination for Ernest and continued the case until Friday.

former actress' activities here today. With her attorney, Eugene H. Marcus, she visited the police homicide bureau and asked to see the night dress.

Denies Ownership of Garment.

"I never owned such a gown," she declared. "If I had, it never would have been found in Mr. Taylor's home. This malicious rumor is disproved."

Then she was shown some of the slain man's clothing and wept.

Miss Minter's demand for indictment or exoneration was made to District Attorney Buron Fitts.

"We have no evidence to warant reopening the Taylor murder case at this time," he said. "It is natural, therefore, that we are not prepared to prosecute any one at this time, nor are we accusing any one."

The prosecutor denied that he had been visited by Mrs. Ada Deane-Tanner, wife of Taylor's missing brother. [The director's real name was Deane-Tanner.]

Brother Not Wanted.

"We have been told that Dennis Deane-Tanner and Edward F. Sands are the same man, but fingerprints have disproved it," he added. "We are not seeking Mr. Taylor's brother, nor attempting to connect him with the crime."

The last previous flareup of the Taylor case was in 1930. At that time Miss Minter, whose mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, was suing a brokerage firm for $750,000 of the actress' money, charged that she had been the victim of attempted blackmail through threats to connect her with the murder.

PUBLISHERS ASK FREEDOM FROM LABOR ACT RULE

Join in Supreme Court Wagner Law Test.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Far reaching questions of the power of the federal government to interfere in the management of the press and to compel collective bargaining between employers and employés generally are raised in a brief filed in the Supreme court today by the American Newspaper Publishers' association.

The publishers' brief was one of three filed during the day attacking the constitutionality of the Wagner national labor relations act. The Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines pronounced the act "an incident or part of a legislative policy aimed at the regimentation of the industry of the country as a whole, with the centralization of control in the national government." The Friedman-Harry Marks Clothing company said, "the act was intended to assist union labor in its efforts to unionize all industry and business through the establishment of a national scheme of compulsory unilateral collective bargaining."

Files as Friend of Court.

The publishers' association filed its brief as friend of the court in the case in which the national labor relations board is seeking to compel the Associated Press, leading news gathering service, to reinstate in its employ a discharged editorial employé, Morris Watson, a member of the American Newspaper guild.

The Court of Appeals upheld the board's order to reinstate the employé and the Associated Press appealed to the Supreme court.

"The fundamental issue in this case, insofar as it concerns the newspaper publishing business, is whether congress can create or endow a legislative agency with power to control the various steps and operations essential to the gathering and dissemination of information by the press," says the brief which was prepared by Elisha Hanson, counsel for the publishers' association.

The publishers contend that the order to reinstate Watson represents an infringement of the freedom of the press guaranteed by the first amendment to the constitution and a violation of other provisions of the bill of rights.

Questions Board's Power.

"Even if the board," says the brief, "correctly found that Watson was discharged because of his guild activities, it is the belief of this amicus curiae that the board is without constitutional power to order his reinstatement and compel compliance with that order. Rather, it believes that when, in the judgment of a publisher, a news writer or editor, by reason of external affiliations, influences or activities becomes unsuited for his employment, no agency of the government either has the power or can be endowed with the power by congress to interfere with the exercise of that judgment, whatever the nature of the employé's affiliations or activities may be.

"A newspaper publisher is responsible, under the constitution and laws of this country, for the contents of his publication and for the policies as expressed in his publication. He cannot be restrained in the conduct of his publication, even though he is subject to subsequent punishment for abuse of his responsibility or violation of law. A publisher cannot divest himself of this responsibility even though by his own action he may limit the exercise of his judgment and surrender control of his policies to persons or organizations who are not responsible to the general public.

Cites Previous Interpretation.

"By the precise terms of the first amendment, as interpreted by this court, congress is without power to interfere with him in the exercise of his judgment or the meeting of his responsibility.

"If such power does exist, then the responsibility for the gathering and dissemination of information has been transferred from the press to the government and the press has become a creature of the government.

"If such power exists, then the press is no longer untrammeled, no longer a vital source of public information.

"The act here in controversy purports to clothe the national labor relations board with such power."

The publishers explain at great length that the regimentation of brains would impair the quality and destroy the independence of newspapers.

Valued as Individuals.

"The value and effectiveness of newspaper copy, and hence the value and effectiveness of the services of reporters and editors who write it, depend upon such qualities as personality, ambition, imagination, creative ability, independence of mind, and diverse and special intellectual talent. These qualities are exclusively individualistic, not subject to classification, regimentation, or standardization.

"These individual talents, though not always clearly definable, are nevertheless discernible to the publisher or editor, who must have reporters and editorial writers who as a group constitute a staf of balanced excellence and talents and who as individuals are creative, independent, and both able and free to see, narrate, and criticize, and who, above all, are chosen on merit and without regard to external affiliations or influences.

"For any external organization or tribunal, regardless of origin, method, or intention, to participate in control of news or editorial stafs through the process of selection, determining tenure, or requiring restoration to employment of staf members, or by any other means which ingenuity may contrive, is directly to exercise an influence in the determination of what shall be written, what shall be printed, who shall write it, and how it shall be written and edited.

Surrender of Responsibility.

"For a publisher or editor to permit such participation, in whatever form of direction or indirection it may be advanced, is a deprivation or surrender of that which is at once the duty, the responsibility, and the right of that publisher or editor, namely, to determine the character of the newspaper.

"Such a surrender or deprivation is impossible for any newspaper that stands for intellectual freedom for its news and editorial stafs and for an independent press.

"A publisher cannot meet his responsibility if by government fiat he is compelled to accede to the demands of any group of employés that employment in his editorial and news departments shall be restricted to any list of membership chosen by such an organization or group, or that compensation for work done in these departments shall be based upon any rule of uniformity, irrespective of quality, whatever the yardstick may be.

"A statute, such as the one here in controversy, deprives the publisher of the right to determine the character of his newspaper in a manner repugnant to the first amendment. Also it deprives him of his right to make contracts about his affairs in a manner repugnant to the fifth amendment."

The publishers call attention to three decisions of the Supreme court upholding the principle enunciated by Madison that "security of freedom of the press requires that it should be exempt, not only from previous restraint by executive, as in Great Britain, but from legislative restraint also."

"It is respectfully submitted," the brief concludes, "that under the provisions of the first and the fifth amendments congress has no power either to compel or to forbid collective bargaining; that it has no power to substitute its judgment to that of one of its agencies for the judgment of those who conduct the business of the press.

"If a newspaper publisher desires to enter into contracts with his employés by the terms of which he restricts his right of selection to members of any particular organization, congress is without power to interfere with him in his determination so to do.

"Likewise, congress is without power to compel a newspaper publisher to enter into such an agreement.

"Neither has congress the power to say to a citizen of this country who desires to engage in newspaper work that as a condition precedent to such employment he must obtain membership in a labor organization approved by one of its agencies."

Judge David Testifies in Zintak Trial

Toss of Dollar Leads to 3 Stowaways' Hiding Place

New York, Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Loss of a silver dollar was the undoing of three stowaways, it was revealed today when the Grace liner Santa Maria docked. A. J. Anthony, chief purser, was tossing the coin in the air along the boat desk. He missed the catch and it slipped under the canvas covering of a lifeboat. When the cover was removed the stowaways were discovered.

DAVID HAMMERS ZINTAK STORY OF JUDICIAL I O U'S

Contradicts Defense Plea; Boisterous on Stand.

Judge David is shown by excerpts of their testimony on the witness stand. Zintak testified first on direct examination by his attorneys.

Advice by Judges Told.

Q.—Did you talk to Judge David about advances? A.—Yes, I did when he came down to ask me for some money. He said he needed some money, and I told him I didn't have the right [to advance it]. He told me "you have the right to do with the money [meaning the office funds] as you see fit so long as you have it ready to pay on demand." He said I could keep it and do with it as I wanted because I was the sole director of it so long as it was ready on demand.

Q.—Did Judges Marcus Kavanagh and Harry Lewis tell you substantially the same? A.—Yes, they did.

On cross-examination on the same subject Zintak testified as follows:

Q.—As a matter of fact Judge David never borrowed any money, did he? A.—Yes, he did.

Q.—When? A.—During that payless time.

Q.—As a matter of fact Judge David never had any transaction with you except when he left a check there to be cashed, isn't that true? A.—No, sir, that is not.

On Instances of Borrowing.

Q.—Then you said he borrowed money when he didn't leave a check? A.—Yes.

Judge David, who sat among the spectators with a stern look on his face and refused—probably for the first time in his life—to be interviewed, heard the latter part of the cross-examination of Zintak. He walked swiftly to the witness stand when the prosecution called out his name and snapped his replies.

Q.—Are you acquainted with the defendant, Zintak? A.—I am.

Q.—Did you ever get any money from his office when he was clerk of the Superior court when you did not leave a check? A.—I did not.

He Snaps Up Questions.

Q.—In 1933 or 1934 or any time did you say to Zintak that you needed money and he said I don't think I have the right to pay it and. . . .

The judge interrupted the prosecutor to interject emphatically "I never had such a conversation."

Q.—And did you say to this defendant that he had a right to do anything he wanted with the money so long as he had it when it was called for, or that in substance? A.—No such conversation ever took place.

Q.—And did you say to him that he was the sole director of the money and could keep it anywhere he wanted or do anything with it or pay salary advances as long as he had it when wanted or had it at the expiration of his term? A.—No such conversation ever took place.

Attorney Short started to cross-examine Judge David. He first got him to admit that he had cashed checks "many times" in the clerk's office.

Clashes with Attorneys.

Q.—Did you ever present a check to be held for payment later? A.—I did once, but . . .

The judge apparently was going to keep on talking but Attorney Short cut him short by announcing he had answered the question. The judge persisted he never told Zintak he could use the office funds. Prosecutor Wright then asked some questions on re-direct examination.

He started by asking him about Judge Lewis, one of those named by Zintak, and the witness replied he was "dead" and was about to go on when the defense attorney jumped to his feet.

"I object to the witness making any speeches," said Attorney Short. "He is just the same as any other witness."

"I'll direct you to ask me about . . ." began Judge David to Prosecutor Wright, but Short drowned his voice with objections. It was then the judicial huddle was held and after it Judge David was excused without further ado.

Zintak Takes Most of Day.

The court session was taken up chiefly by Zintak's denial of any intent to defraud and his efforts to convince the jury that all the juggling of checks and maneuvering of the books of his office were "simply bookkeeping transactions." These, he said, were to cover up his philanthropies in making good a shortage in the cashier's cage and in paying destitute county employés, including judges. He never profited one cent by the transactions, he said.

The closing arguments in the case, which are not expected to exceed six hours, will start this morning. The state will ask that Zintak be convicted under the special statute under which he is indicted. This carries a penalty of one to fifteen years in the penitentiary. The ordinary embezzlement penalty is one to ten years.

ZOO LEOPARD KILLS HER THREE CUBS DAY AFTER THEIR BIRTH

Hopes of Lincoln Park zoo officials that they would be able to raise three cubs born to "Spots," the new leopard obtained recently from Germany, have been shattered, Director Floyd S. Young revealed yesterday. The cubs were born three days ago, but on the day after their birth the mother killed them. "You never can tell what a tropical cat will do" said Mr. Young. "We thought this one would raise her babies because she cleaned them up and started playing with them. But she changed her mind."

BR-R! GROUNDHOG SEES WEATHER MAN'S SHADOW

Forecaster A. W. Cook peered over one shoulder yesterday, saw his shadow, then scurried back into the weather bureau for at least six more weeks of winter. No, that's wrong.

Zeke, the prognosticating groundhog at the Lincoln park zoo, was the shadow caster. Or maybe he saw Mr. Cook's shadow, for he did meet Mr. Cook yesterday, when the forecaster called to see the groundhog make his annual spring forecast.

Zeke, who was named for Zeke Bonura, the hibernating first baseman of the White Sox, performed quickly and efficiently. After seeing his shadow, Zeke, like all legendary groundhogs, scampered back into his burrow, certain that spring will be late in coming.

BISHOP STORMS AT GUZZLING OF MODERN PARENTS

Assails Cocktail Parties as Peril to Youth.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Cocktail guzzling parents of present day young people were assailed yesterday by Bishop George Craig Stewart, in his annual charge to the Episcopal diocese of Chicago which opened its 100th convention at the Church of Atonement, Ardmore and Kenmore avenues. The convention will continue through today.

BISHOP STEWART.

"Youth has learned from you," said the bishop as he denounced principles and practices of fashionable parents. "Youth has not learned from your knees, but from your elbows how to guzzle cocktails and to appeal to expediency instead of conscience."

Charges Hedonistic Views.

By indirection Bishop Stewart accused parents in the upper social levels of admitting debutantes 18 years old to full membership and privileges of the elders' social set which, he said, is usually defined as "hedonistic." Hedonism refers to those who regard pleasure derived from the streamlined and modernistic versions of "wine, women and song," as the only reason for existence.

"It was you," said the bishop to "modern" parents, "who taught your children that hedonistic views of life, a view based on intensive and competitive lust which produces at best a life that is solitary, poor, nasty, brutish and short."

Bishop Stewart accused these parents of substituting movie stars for biblical characters, and charged them with "rank irreligion," which rendered them unfit guides.

"It is your generation which lost its faith in God and gave up family prayer and taught your children to sneer at the church," declared the bishop. "How can such parents communicate the religious life they do not possess? The problem of youth is a problem of our homes. I am on the side of youth. I accuse the parents of this generation."

Wally Affair Recalled.

Into these accusations Bishop Stewart introduced the case of the duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Simpson which recalled to his hearers the recent attack on the loose morals of England's fast sets by the archbishops of Canterbury and York. He even went back to Henry VIII. and assailed those who, in referring to the Windsor-Simpson love tangle, called that much divorced Henry the "founder of the Church of England."

"Without reopening a painful subject which for weeks was delectably rolled upon every tongue," said Bishop Stweart, referring to the Windsor-Simpson affair, "may I point to the reappearance within the columns of newspapers of that hackneyed calumny that the Church of England was founded by Henry VIII.

"The charge, as every unprejudiced historian will testify, is false, and yet it will doubtless continue to be repeated by those who are invincibly ignorant or invincibly prejudiced. Rome excommunicated the communicants of the Church of England, not during the reign of Henry VIII, but a generation later in the reign of Queen Elizabeth."

Child Stars in Hollywood Rumpus

Freddie Bartholomew, pride of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, was attired thus for the lead in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," one of his first Hollywood pictures. Recently he finished "Lloyd's of London" and was requested to take 20th Century Fox studio's Jane Withers to the preview. Bluntly fastidious Freddie refused.

Personable Jane (above), a Fox studio favorite, was silent, but her fellow workers were indignant at an ungentlemanly rebuff, especially as it came from a precise young Englishman.

Shirley Temple (here made up for "The Littlest Rebel") provided the knockout punch for Freddie. Like Jane, she is a child star at the Fox studio. Last Saturday night Freddie tried to sidle into camera range when photographers were posing Shirley at one of President Roosevelt's birthday balls. But loyal Fox forces blocked Freddie off and his dash for publicity was a total loss.

U. OF C. INQUIRES INTO PROPAGANDA OF COMMUNISTS

University of Chicago officials said yesterday that they are investigating the distribution of radical literature last Friday at a student talent radio program in Mandel hall on the campus.

The program was an advertisment for the Pontiac Motors corporation, a subsidiary of the General Motors corporation. The pamphlets, signed by the Young Communists' league and the Young People's Socialist league, advocated a vocal demonstration against the sponsors, urging the 1,200 men and women present to "show student solidarity with labor."

Dr. George A. Works, dean of students, said that the investigation began Saturday, and that the names of the students involved are known to officials. Reports that the distribution of the literature resulted in disturbances during the program were denied.

In an editorial yesterday the Daily Maroon, student publication, pointed out that both radical groups are "outside organizations."

Cop, Once Forgiven, Again Shoots at Wife in Home

Policeman Earl Rumley of the West North Avenue station fired several shots at his wife, Lillian, last Sept. 28, but when his case came up she pleaded for leniency for the sake of their three children, and his only punishment was thirty days' suspension from the force. Last night Rumley again fired six shots in their home at 1114 North Harding avenue and his wife again fled, unhurt. She called the Austin avenue police station and Rumley was locked up there on orders of Capt. John Prendergast, chief of the uniform rank. Capt. George Lynch of the Austin station said Rumley had been drinking.

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Mrs. Anna Miller, recluse, age unknown, lay ill among starving chickens and cats—and $42,000 in cash—when police were called today.

Moves to Return Waukegan Paroled Slayer to Prison

State's Attorney Charles E. Mason of Lake county took steps last night to send Jesse Moreno, a convict turned loose by the parole board, back to the Joliet prison. Moreno, who is 40 years old, lives at 314 Madison street, Waukegan. He was sent to prison in 1932 for shooting and killing Halse Colbert of Waukegan, the father of six children, as Colbert sat on the porch of his home.

NEW HOLLYWOOD TRIANGLE SPLITS TWO BIG STUDIOS

Misses No. 1 and No. 11 Give Mr. 55 the Air.

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Hollywood has a new triangle. Two women, one of 10 years, and the other of 7 years, are united in suppressing a gentleman of 12 years. It is a case of a woman scorned and her sister-star rushing to her rescue.

But it already has split two of Hollywood's most tremendous studios. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is hurling bitter charges at 20th Century-Fox and 20th Century is training the guns of every one of its press agents against M.-G.-M.

It all began when some one—maybe a press agent big enough to be known as "public relations man"—suggested that Freddie Bartholomew, M.-G.-M.'s $1,500 a week English boy actor, escort Jane Withers, 20th Century's $1,000 a week child actress, to the premiere of "Lloyds of London," in which he was starred.

"That Dame" in Oxonian.

In the precise Oxonian tones with which Freddie stirs mature women's hearts, he replied:

"I'd rather not go at all than go with that dame."

Worse than that, Freddie cast some slurs at Jane's ranking as a box office attraction. That is an impossible insult to a lady of the theatrical profession.

Worse still, Freddie volunteered to be the escort of Shirley Temple, who, 20th Century admits, gets $500,000 a year of their money.

"It was all right with us if he didn't want to go with Jane," said Harvay Brand, publicity man for 20th Century. "But he didn't have to make that crack about Jane's box office rating.

"She rates eleventh nationally and where does he rate? Yeah, let him answer that. Where does he rate?"

Mr. Brand said "Tch, tch," to himself in a melancholy manner. His sadness, he indicated, was occasioned by Freddie's discourtesy. He continued: "Why, look at the box office reports for last year." By odd coincidence he picked up a copy of the 1936 movie popularity reports.

"Here," he added, "see for yourself. Shirley Temple is No. 1 box office star of the year. Jane Withers is in eleventh place.

"Now find Freddie Bartholomew. See, there he is, in smaller type. If you count down to him, you will find Freddie is in fifty-fifth place.

"That's where all the trouble began—a fifty-fifth place draw trying to upstage a No. 11."

Blow-off at President's Party.

The climax came Saturday night at the President's birthday ball, attended by Master Bartholomew and Miss Temple.

Brand said Freddie spotted Shirley having her picture taken and made a bee-line for her.

At a quick command, studio aides, headed by Jack Mulcahy, former Santa Clara university football player, formed around Shirley, blocking out Freddie and the M-G-M delegation escorting him.

"No Withers—no Temple," 20th Century-Fox forces said, meaningly.

Ah! He's Insulted!

The friction reached fever heat when Freddie's "Aunt Cis," [Miss Myllicent Bartholomew] who is his guardian and movie custodian, confided to Los Angeles newspaper editors that Freddie had been insulted.

Aunt Cis was particularly angry at Shirley's mamma, Mrs. George Temple, who acts as business agent, head tutor, and personal attendant. She was standing beside Shirley when some of Shirley's adult masculine admirers seemed to shoulder Freddie right out of camera range. Imagine!

FLOOD CHANGES LOUISVILLE INTO PRIMITIVE TOWN

Police from Other Cities Help Restore Order.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—How a modern city, turned overnight into a primitive village, goes about the business of restoring itself, was being shown here today.

Thriving Louisville, the "gateway to the south," a city of 330,000 population, suddenly found two-thirds of its area under from one to 30 feet of water. The Ohio river, normally less than a mile wide, became eight miles wide.

What does a modern city do under such conditions? What must be done when 200,000 persons are driven from their homes, when gas and electricity are shut off, when street car and motor transportation is halted, and when crime, fire, and health hazards are multiplied a thousand fold?

Still Under Martial Law.

Louisville officials learned more each day about the immense complexity of their problem. Today, nine days after "disaster Sunday," Jan. 24, when the river engulfed the city, they perceive that a major part of their job still remains to be done.

The city remains under martial law. Six hundred policemen from other cities, with 850 regular army men help Louisville's 400 policemen enforce the orders of the emergency dictatorship set up by Mayor Neville Miller.

The police problem is nothing at all like the kind which faced the city only ten days ago—before the flood. Then swift radio controled squad cars patroled the streets. Electric signals controled the flow of trafic. Prisoners were taken to the county jail and their cases were heard by the courts in orderly fashion.

Seize Schools and Hospitals.

The flood and the dictatorship changed all that. For the first few days all the city's resources were mobilized for the task of moving 200,000 persons to places of safety. Schools, hospitals, every building on the east side highlands, even the county jail, were seized for this purpose.

Then came the looting. Grocery and liquor stores in the inundated areas soon were stripped. With the arrival of troops and martial law the order went out to "shoot to kill" all looters. Authorities admit that two men caught pillaging were shot to death. Their bodies fell into the water and were lost.

The actual number of plunderers killed probably never will be known. During the height of the flood the situation became so bad that no one was permitted to enter any store without an order from Mayor Miller.

All flooded areas now have been quarantined. Army sentry posts guard all entrances. Only persons with permits may enter and permits are hard to get.

Among the 600 policemen from other cities, summoned to help Louisville's exhausted force, are 67 men from Chicago, in command of Capt. Andrew Barry and Lieut. G. F. Brooks. Most of them are living at the exclusive Pendennis club, in the downtown section, where many distinguished guests have been entertained.

Policemen Sleeping on Cots.

The policemen are sleeping on cots in the billiard and bar rooms. A valuable oriental rug is draped over the entrance to the improvised dormitories in an effort to keep out drafts. Several small oil heaters provide the only heat in the building.

The basement kitchen is flooded, so no hot food can be prepared. A Chicago fire engine is now at work pumping out the basement, uncovering the steam tables, which have been useless since the flood.

The Chicago policemen, quartered with men from Boston, Toledo, and Philadelphia, are living under conditions that are typical in most of the city. All schools are closed. Most of them house refugees. Flooded basements have put most of the city's heating plants out of commission. Even though the river is receding, those flooded basements remain as one of the biggest tasks in bringing order out of chaos.

Night and day the people of Louisville hear the drone of gasoline motors, pumping, pumping, pumping.

Must Inspect All Walls.

Even after a home owner can get back to his house or apartment, he can't move in again. City inspectors must examine the building to see if the water has weakened the walls so that it is in danger of collapsing. Swamped by this task, Louisville's city building department asked other cities to send experts to help.

Some home owners have obtained permission to return to their homes. They are sorry places, even without considering the damages to furnishings. No electricity is available, which means no lights, no refrigerators, no washing machines. Candles and kerosene lamps flicker, even in downtown restaurants.

Plenty of power is available, but it can't be used until transformers and cables have been inspected. Utilities men, augmented by crews from other cities, work night and day at this job. Electricians must inspect every building to see if it is safe to turn power into the water soaked wires.

Laundries Unable To Work.

The dependence of a city on electricity has been illustrated in a thousand ways. All motors are motionless in manufacturing plants. Laundries and cleaning plants are unable to work. Thousands of garments have been shipped by the Red Cross to other cities to be cleaned.

Hotels, which have been doing a "Derby day" business, have not had clean linens for a week. Business houses, formerly under water, were working their stafs overtime to get their places cleaned.

Trolley cars also awaited the return of electric power. It was expected to be restored Saturday for operation in part of the city. Regular water service was promised, beginning tomorrow.

Wins Divorce

MRS. KATHRYN BROGAN.

Mrs. Kathryn Brogan, 616 Rush street, a show girl, was granted a divorce on the ground of desertion yesterday by Judge Donald S. McKinlay of the Superior court from Frank Brogan, 28 years old, a New York liquor dealer. She testified they married March 4, 1935, and separated seven months later. Mrs. Brogan, who is 21 years old, said at that time she found her husband packing, as he explained, "for a long journey out of your life."

BRITISH RADICALS FLAY MONARCHY; CALL IT OUTWORN

Attack Plan for Regency to Rule for George VI.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Whether republicanism would not be a better form of government for Great Britain than a hereditary monarchy was brought up in the house of commons today by a little group of leftists headed by J. Maxton.

J. MAXTON.

The matter was raised during debate on the government's regency bill which passed second reading by 305 votes to 1. The bill would make the duke of Gloucester, brother of King George VI. of England, or other members of the royal family regents in case of the king's illness or absence from the country before his heir reaches the age of 18.

"No Confidence in King."

Maxton and his tiny republican group charged that the bill would remove from the house of commons the ability to review the monarchy from time to time and would perpetuate a system which, they declared, was outworn and worthless.

W. Gallacher, communist leader, declared that the bill reflects the government's belief that there is no confidence in George VI. and that he is not expected to last out his time.

G. Buchanan, Independent Laborite, cast the sole vote against the bill. Gallacher and Maxton acted as tellers for the "noes," and therefore were unable to vote.

Seven members of parliament actually support Maxton's republicanism, but four were absent today.

Maxton charged that the bill would place ultimate governmental control in the hands of four or five unknown and inexperienced people. While Tory members squirmed in their seats and gritted their teeth, Maxton continued:

"When any one starts trying to put over on the mass of educated people in this day that the monarchy has some intelligent justification as a governmental form you have to go on from step to step keeping up the delusion. That delusion, in my view, received its final quietus when the conception of the divine right of kings was thrown overboard and it received a terrible knock a few weeks ago at the time of the abdication."

Recalls Insanity of George III.

Maxton then recalled that George III. had been insane.

"If a monarch had been insane, then the next in line of succession could be insane too," he continued, adding that none of the persons who would be regents under the terms of the present bill has had any experience or training in government.

Maxton wanted the regents to be chosen from among men who have had responsible positions in the administrative life of the country, he explained.

"To tie up responsibility in governmental affairs to hereditary princes without qualification and experience is a negation of democratic principles," he concluded.

Notice this sample puzzle. It represents a name. Can you find the name in the following list?

Tommy Tucker
Nora Bayes
Roger Williams
Paul Revere
Will Rogers
Georges Clemenceau

The solution, of course, is NORA BAYES.

Look at the N. Notice the OAR. Observe that the young lady is grunting "UH". Put all of those clues together and you have: N-OAR-UH, which combines to form the word NORA.

The rest of the puzzle is easy. The B on the boat together with AYE-AYE (AYES), gives you B-AYES, pronounced as BAYES.

Thus the solution: NORA BAYES.

You will not find this contest easy; particularly after the puzzles get harder, but if you truly enjoy a contest of SKILL, HERE IT IS!

FEAR REVIVED AT CAIRO AS FLOOD BEGINS NEW RISE

Levee Patrol Is Doubled After 15 Hour Lull.

Cairo, Ill., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Tension suddenly increased at Cairo tonight when the unpredictable Ohio, dumping record flood waters into the slowly swelling Mississippi, began a new rise after a 15 hour lull that convinced many the crest had been reached. Now the crest is expected some time tomorrow.

The weary levee force, which had relaxed somewhat when the river held stationary, hastily reacted to the new menace. The patrol was doubled along every foot of the emergency bulkhead atop the 60 foot seawall. The coast guard, here with 55 boats from the Atlantic seaboard, ordered an all night watch for the first time.

Below here, at New Madrid, Mo., tragedy deepened tonight when it was learned that at least 15 levee workers had lost their lives in a barge submersion Saturday night while trying to protect that area.

Fear Effect of Rain.

It had been believed that only six men had been drowned when more than 100 WPA workmen went down with the barge, but ten more bodies were recovered late today. Thirteen more were listed by army engineers as unaccounted for.

Down through the big river basin, where the Mississippi had climbed past flood stage as far south as Baton Rouge, La., residents feared the eventuality of a general rain over major tributaries before the great volume of water poured into the river by the Ohio could be carried through.

The fight to hold the lower Mississippi levees was complicated somewhat by the tributary St. Francis river basin being flooded to above the level reached in the disastrous 1927 floods.

All main line levees continued to hold firm today, but a secondary dike near the hamlet of Bessie, Tenn., gave way for the fourth time under the weight of wind churned waters.

More Refugees Picked Up.

Engineers said Tiptonville, Tenn., near Bessie, might be entirely isolated. Motorboats picked up the few residents left in the territory flooded by waters from the new break.

The major danger points in the area of New Madrid, Mo., Hickman, Ky., and Bessie and Tiptonville, Tenn., were inspected today by President Roosevelt's flood relief committee. Having come up that far by automobile, the members of the committee decided to proceed the rest of the way to Cairo by boat.

The party, which includes WPA Director Harry L. Hopkins and Major General Edward H. Markham, rode the commission river steamer, the Inspector, up stream tonight for an engagement with Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois in Cairo at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Victory Almost in Grasp.

Cairo had felt victory almost within her grasp today as the Ohio remained stationary hour after hour at a stage half a foot below the top of the concrete wall and three and a half feet below the emergency bulkhead.

Despite the assertion of army engineers that the crest was not at hand and Mayor August Bode's warning against premature rejoicing, most of the 5,000 men making a spectacular fight to save the city felt that the battle was just about over.

Then came the turn and the river again started its dreaded rise. Everywhere in the all but deserted city fears increased. Reinforcements that had been resting rushed up to the front line to guard against any last minute mishap that might turn into defeat their dogged fight.

Although the crest had not yet reached Cairo, being expected tomorrow, river men did not believe the peak stage would raise the water much higher.

Up on the falling Ohio, death, flames, and more suffering accompanied rehabilitation work.

Building Crashes; 1 Dead.

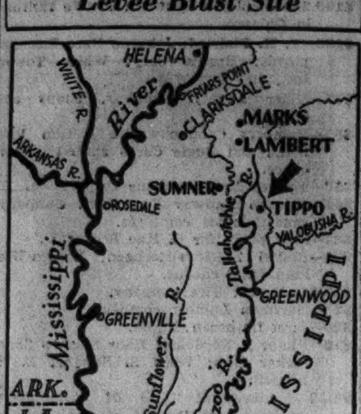
At Ironton, O., a three story brick building which had been weakened by flood waters suddenly collapsed. One woman was killed and another was seriously injured.

A $75,000 fire swept the temporarily abandoned city of Paducah. The few persons remaining in the city tried without success to fight the flames with equipment floating on barges.

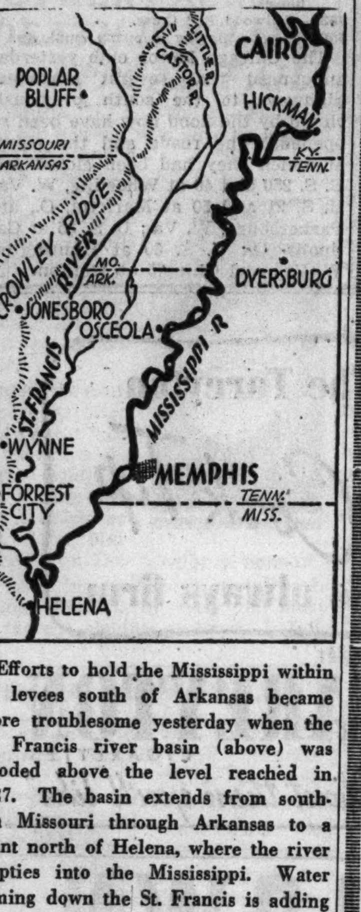
At Louisville, Ky., hardest hit of the cities stricken by the Ohio flood waters, the homeless were urged by Mayor Neville Miller to have patience and not all try to return to their homes until an inspection is made by sanitary engineers.

Rehabilitation work was under way at most points in flood swept southern Illinois and Indiana, but Harrisburg, Ill., was still in the midst of a fight against inundation and an epidemic of pneumonia.

Levee Blast Site



Residents living along the Mississippi river south of Tippo, Miss. (indicated by arrow), were worried by reports of levee dynamiting yesterday. A Tallahatchie river barrier was blasted near Tippo, apparently to relieve flood threats at the towns of Lambert and Marks to the north and Sumner to the northwest. The Tallahatchie is a tributary of the Yazoo, which empties into the Mississippi near historic Vicksburg.



Efforts to hold the Mississippi within its levees south of Arkansas became more troublesome yesterday when the St. Francis river basin (above) was flooded above the level reached in 1927. The basin extends from southern Missouri through Arkansas to a point north of Helena, where the river empties into the Mississippi. Water coming down the St. Francis is adding a burden on the already high Mississippi.

HELD TO FEDERAL JURY.

William Franklin Jones, 30 years old, 826 South Wabash avenue, was held to the grand jury in $5,000 bond by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker yesterday on a charge of impersonating a federal officer. He already has served four prison terms for similar offenses.

FLOOD REFUGEES SEE WONDERS OF A STRANGE WORLD

Exodus Reveals Problems of Valley Inhabitants.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—In the backwaters of the Mississippi valley this flood is revealing a population that is barely literate, that knows nothing of the wide and beautiful world beyond shop windows of the nearest town, that is poorly nourished, quick on the pistol trigger, and productive of many children. This is the problem of the richest valley in the world.

Evacuation of flood refugees has begun in Memphis, and hundreds are being shipped out daily to towns that are not in danger of water, or to homes of relatives. The whole midsouth is one neighborhood in this emergency. Hundreds of miles away from the river families are taking in friends and even strangers. There is room and food enough for all. But the bigger problem of the future remains.

"I'm glad to get out of there," said an Osceola woman, as she sat in front of the Central High school, a Memphis refugee center, waiting for a man to take her to the bus station.

Too Many People, She Says.

"They let me go because I had a little money. I was mighty proud of it. This boy here didn't have a smidgin bit of cold when I came but now he coughs all the time. When I get him home I will put some oil and fat on him. I won't let him go to a hospital.

"The men folks got scared or we wouldn't have come here. It's all right but I want my own mattress and the quiet. Too many people here."

These people are not strong for being helped to a "new life," even though it were offered, and the ministers and social workers, kind hearted people, run into something adamant and individualistic.

"I'd rather have my own corn bread and swabbin' gravy," said a man in overalls who had just come from the school cafeteria, where girls with gauze bandages waited on the throng and R. O. T. C. boys kept "order."

Simple Problem to Them.

It is a simple problem for such families. They simply move in on a piece of new land after making some rental arrangements with the boss, and build themselves a new house. It does not cost much. Fifty dollars outside the labor would cover the cost of many of these homes. And when the crops come in they have a little cash. There is work for only a few months of the year, and in the meantime they have something to eat from the "bossman" and enjoy life.

They may realize in cash $50 or $100 a year, but they had rather go back to the familiar quiet fields than stay in the bewildering city. They are lost here. Many families are separated and the volunteer workers are having their greatest difficulty with such situations.

Ministers through the southland have come to the front in this emergency. They told the people in their sermons last Sunday that this was a visitation of a wrathful God upon a sinful world, that there was too much "wine, women, and song" in the world, and that God had spoken to wicked cities.

At the same time the ministers turned to work on Monday to help out the people that God was punishing, and have been the leaders in relief activity in most of the smaller towns. The Memphis Ministerial association and hundreds of church women are at work assisting the Red Cross.

Memphis, itself remains above the flood, but thousands of workers are piling sandbags on the lower levees to protect the farmlands below the city. Nearly all highways to the city are now blocked.

Moving Forward

Marshall Field & Company presents here each day observations and opinions intended to be of interest and value to those it seeks to serve

BUSINESS IS PEOPLE

By CALEB

PESSIMISTS are usually short-sighted persons of long vision. Since men learned to write, some have looked through hypermetropic eyes and predicted in imperishable writing the ruin of poor perishable man. If it hasn't been man, it is civilization, or western civilization, that has been given short shrift for existence.

Science came along and with the colossal blessings it showered upon man came threats and disadvantages which looked equally colossal to some prophets. Technology, some say, sired by the industrial revolution and dammed by science, is the ogre which will devour the individual citizen—which means, in the large, the people.

Pessimists are long-visioned because they anticipate the future so far. They are short-sighted because they do not see the bud of its own absorption in every growing threat.

The pendulum of progress swings crazily, but it can swing only so far before it starts back. The people do not let loose upon themselves their destroyers without some strings with which to haul them back. The things man lets loose upon the earth, man lets loose—and man can meet them. Sooner or later those things which threaten most furiously reach the people where they feel and live. Then remedial steps are taken.

Science can go just so far in the office or laboratory or mill or factory. Then it, too, comes up against people—people who must be friendly or it is stopped. If technology would make industry too efficient and reduce the workers and curtail man's work too completely, it concludes, when it looks at its bank account, it had best conserve or increase the incomes of the commonwealth, or it won't pay to run its efficient machines.

If the pessimist predicts this or that interest will be going too far in a mechanistic direction, sooner or later his predictions are upset by the inertia of this interest, or the leadership and the counsel of opponents who have arisen to contest the field.

More and more those in high places who are wisely calculating make people an important ingredient in all their formulas and activities. The pessimist forgets that when the social consequences of the efforts and activities of unsocial men are clearly seen, society takes matters into its own hands. After all, civilization and science and industry are people. And last, but not least, business—fruit of civilization, science, and industry—is people.

DENMARK WHIPS SYPHILIS; BEGAN WAR ON IT IN 1788

Victims Are Compelled to Get Free Treatment.

reported to the police. They arrest him and confine him in a prison hospital until he is declared no longer a public danger.

The patient must also disclose the source and circumstances of his infection, and these contacts are immediately traced by the police.

Police Raid Brothels.

If the source of infection is found to be a prostitute she is promptly sent to a prison hospital for a long enough time to make certain that she is no longer a public danger. If, as sometimes happens, these investigations disclose the existence of secret brothels they are raided and severe penalties imposed on the keepers. The brothel system is illegal in Denmark and to keep one is a serious offense.

So famous has the Danish method become that foreign seamen are seeking jobs in Danish ships when they are infected so that when they reach a Danish port they can claim free treatment in comfortable hospitals until they are cured. These men account for most of the new cases reported. Shipmasters are compelled to report cases among their crews. The victims are then isolated.

Marvelous results in combating syphilis have been achieved by the Danish system. In 1934—the last year for which complete figures are available—there were only 874 cases in the whole country of which 242 were in Copenhagen, which is one of the greatest ports in the world with its harbor swarming with the ships from every country with every degree of hygienic control, or the lack of it.

Most interesting, however, is a graph drawn up by Dr. Frandsen. It shows the rise and fall of venereal disease in the country and in Copenhagen since 1877. The graph illustrates how the rate remains almost stationary and negligible in the country as a whole, while it rises and falls sharply in the capital.

Disease Thrives on Prosperity.

It also upholds the theory propounded by Dr. Ankersvärd, the Swedish expert, that syphilis thrives on prosperity. Thus it will be seen that in 1877 for the whole of Denmark the syphilis rate was about 2 cases per every 10,000 inhabitants while in 1935 it was exactly the same. The highest peak for Denmark was reached in 1919 when it rose to six cases per every 10,000 inhabitants. Since then there has been a steady fall.

In Copenhagen the curve is even more interesting. In 1877 the syphilis rate was 28 cases per every 10,000 inhabitants. But in the following year there was a sharp rise, reaching an all time peak of 68 per 10,000. This was a time of great expansion and prosperity in Denmark but the Copenhagen figures were not reflected in the country, this tending to indicate that even then most of the new cases of the plague entered through the great port.

From 1886 on there was a sharp drop to 26 cases per 10,000 in 1891 and then a climb again to 1901 with another peak of 44. Since then there has been a steady downward tendency and the figure for 1935 was only 5 cases per every 10,000. This means that the Copenhagen rate has been reduced almost to a level with that of the whole country.

Gonorrhea Decreases.

The same graph shows almost the same curve for gonorrhea. From 172 in 1877 the rate per 10,000 for Copenhagen climbed to 215 in 1883, which was an all time high. However, it has fallen quite steadily since then and in 1935 it was 70 cases per every 10,000 inhabitants. As in other Scandinavian countries the control of gonorrhea has not been so successful as that of syphilis and the reason, as Dr. Frandsen said, is that "we have not yet discovered a salvarsan for gonorrhea."

The Scandinavian experience has proved beyond all doubt that syphilis can be reduced to a minimum by isolated national action under a strictly enforced régime. It has also proved that if equally strict international control could be introduced the disease could be eradicated.

Keep Track of Old Victims.

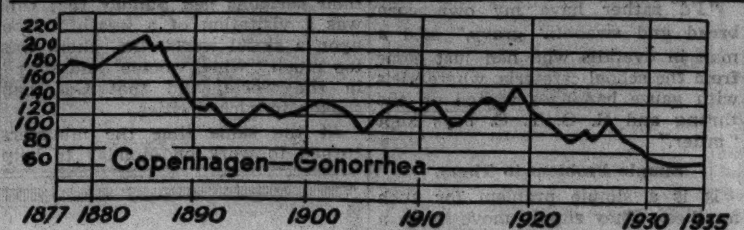
The most useful part of the Danish machinery for the control of syphilis is the Danish State Serum institute. The head of it is Dr. Christian Medsen, who is one of the world's greatest syphilologists. This institute, which is located in Copenhagen, makes the blood tests for persons suspected of syphilis for the whole country. It has a card index system extending over nearly twenty years and contains the name and address of every person who has suffered from the disease in Denmark.

From this index it is possible to keep track of every syphilitic subject. Every time the patient sees a physician he is reported to the Serum institute and if the person fails to keep up with the treatment he or she can be traced and compelled, if necessary, to resume the treatment.

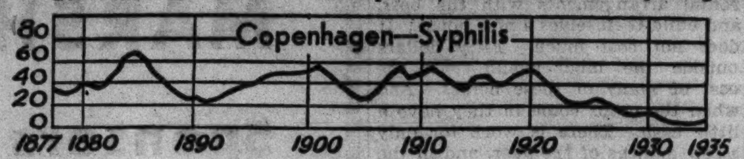
Like most Danes Dr. Medsen dislikes compulsion and relies on persuasion, and above all on public education.

"What is needed in the United States as it was needed here is public education on the danger of the plague," he said. "Our people, young and old, now recognize the danger to themselves and the public. You must create the same realization in the United States."

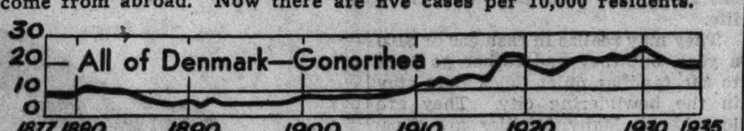
How Danes Curb Social Diseases



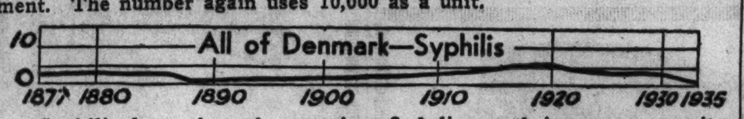
Gonorrhea declines to 70 cases per 10,000 residents in Copenhagen.



Copenhagen registers a steady fall in syphilis; most new cases come from abroad. Now there are five cases per 10,000 residents.



Gonorrhea at a low level in Denmark, due to compulsory treatment. The number again uses 10,000 as a unit.



Syphilis drops throughout nation; find disease thrives on prosperity.

COMEDIAN MIMICS HITLER WITH JEWISH ACCENT; FINED $50

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—A comedian and a theater manager were fined today for representing Adolf Hitler with a supposedly Jewish accent.

The comedian, Hal Bryan, was fined $50 and Manager Thomas Piggott of King's theater, Hammersmith, $75.

The action was brought by the lord chancellor. The court was told that the scene, not a part of the original licensed script, had Bryan, made up as Hitler, rushing onto the stage, giving the Nazi salute, and crying: "Vot iss dis all aboudt?"

LINDBERGHS PLAY HIDE AND SEEK AT ROMAN AIRPORT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Feb. 2.—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh played hide and seek with a crowd of 200 persons after the famous flying couple landed at the Littorio airport this afternoon on the second leg of a secret sight-seeing flight. The Lindberghs presumably are on a trip to Cairo, Egypt.

After keeping authorities of many countries guessing as to their whereabouts on the flight which began at Lympne, England, yesterday, the colonel and his wife landed at Pisa, Italy, last night. Prior to their arrival in that city airport officials in Europe feared they might have crashed.

The Lindberghs upon landing at the Littorio airport made strenuous efforts to avoid a pursuing crowd which extended the Fascist salute. Very few cheers were raised. The couple ran through a hangar and barricaded themselves in an office at one end of the building. Later they were driven to Rome. It is believed the Lindberghs will spend the night in Rome. They may take off for Brindisi tomorrow.

DAY'S RED CROSS GIFTS $125,000; TOTAL $852,000

City Raises 90% of Quota; Pupils Send $40,000.

U. S. VENEREAL EXPERT HERE IN SYPHILIS FIGHT

Wenger and City Leaders Demand Case Reports.

Dr. Oliver C. Wenger, surgeon of the United States public health service, arrived in Chicago yesterday morning to help plan the strategy of the city's campaign against venereal infections.

Dr. Wenger took part in all day conferences in the office of Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, with Dr. Louis E. Schmidt, secretary of the board; Dr. George G. Taylor, director of the municipal social hygiene clinic; Dr. Isaac Rawlings, director of the division of communicable diseases; Dr. William Fishbein, director of the division of infant welfare; Henry Porsche, chief clerk, health department, and Milton Smith, assistant corporation counsel.

Action was taken to draft a standard blank on which doctors, clinics and dispensaries are to report all cases of syphillis and gonorrhea. The diverse forms now in use by various interested agencies make the reports all but useless for public health officers, according to Dr. Wenger.

Helps Out All States.

Dr. Wenger has been in charge of the public health service venereal diseases clinic at Hot Springs, Ark., for 16 years, and has acted as consultant in venereal problems in the public health service of all 48 states.

"We want to make Chicago a model for all the cities of the United States," he said in an interview. "Perhaps the city may not have as much money for this work as some others, and perhaps the public health service may not be able to contribute as much as it had hoped, because of the floods, but Chicago is awake to the problem.

"The excellent work of THE TRIBUNE has induced the public to face the problem realistically. And the medical schools of the city have supplied it with a great number of doctors capable of coping with this menace."

Margaret Sanger Backs Idea.

Dr. Wenger's arrival here coincided with that of Mrs. Margaret Sanger, pioneer birth control propa-Sanger, birth control leader. Both share today in the observance of National Social Hygiene day.

"I am 100 per cent in favor of Chicago's drive against syphilis and gonorrhea," said Mrs. Sanger.

Mrs. Sanger, who spoke last night in the First Methodist church of Evanston, will depart today for Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz., where she is to establish birth control clinics.

Today's Social Hygiene day programs will be sponsored by both the Illinois Social Hygiene league and the Chicago Medical society.

CAPTURES BOND JUMPER; QUOTES LAW TO KEEP HIM

Louis S. Cornett, a dapper professional bondsman from Omaha, proved here yesterday that he knows his rights. When John Faltys, 45 years old, jumped a $1,000 bond posted by Cornett two weeks ago in connection with an Omaha tavern swindle, the bondsman trailed his man to Chicago. Last Monday he located him at 4052 Broadway. Then followed a spirited chase through city streets, in and out of hotels and taxicabs, until Cornett nabbed his man.

Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan insisted Cornett needed an extradition warant to take his prisoner home until Cornett pointed out a United States Supreme court decision holding that a prisoner is the property of the bondsman who needs no extradition papers.

With his prisoner shackled to him Cornett happily boarded a train for Omaha last night.

MOTHER FACING DEATH IN CHAIR; APPEAL FAILS

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 2.—(AP)—A 29 year old mother, who gave up a small fortune and a school teacher's career nine years ago to marry a plodding farmer, today lost her appeal to New Jersey's highest court to save her from the electric chair.

MRS. M. F. DOLBOW.

Unless the court of pardons intervenes or the United States Supreme court orders a new trial on a possible appeal, Mrs. Marguerite Fox Dolbow and her childhood sweetheart, Norman Driscoll, 37 years old, must die for the slaying of Harry I. Dolbow.

The indictment of the 37 year old mother of three probably will cause withdrawal of the habeas corpus petition.

$5,000 RANSOM DEMANDED FOR MISSING DOCTOR

Officials Reveal Kidnaping of Missouri Physician.

BULLETIN.

Willow Springs, Mo., Feb. 3 [Wednesday].—(AP)—State Highway Patrol Chief B. Marvin Casteel said he had given up all hope early today of finding alive Dr. J. C. B. Davis, 67, country physician who was kidnaped a week ago. "I feel confident that Dr. Davis is dead," Casteel said. Several car loads of state police and federal agents departed hurriedly for an unannounced destination at midnight, and took with them a suspect arrested last Saturday. The party returned about 4 a. m., when Casteel expressed his certainty that Dr. Davis was dead, but declined to make any further statement about the case.

Willow Springs, Mo., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Authorities said today that Dr. J. C. B. Davis, prominent physician and politician who has been missing for a week, was kidnaped and is being held for $5,000 ransom.

It also was disclosed that a ransom note in the 67 year old doctor's handwriting was received last Thursday. The note was mailed in West Plains, 22 miles from here.

The kidnaping was confirmed by Col. B. Marvin Casteel, chief of the state highway patrol, after members of the Davis family had declined to discuss it on the ground the physician's life might be endangered.

An attempt was made last Saturday midnight to contact the abductors and pay the ransom, but was unsuccessful, it was said.

The physician's medicine kit was found last Friday in the North Fork river, about 15 miles southeast of here. The discovery suggested the possibility the kidnapers had slain Dr. Davis and were disposing of his effects.

It was pointed out that while Dr. Davis is well to do and widely known throughout this territory, where he has practiced medicine for 35 years, he is not wealthy. He is chairman of the Howell county Democratic committee.

The last known person to see the physician was Mrs. Myrtle Patterson, a school teacher, who told police she saw Dr. Davis in an automobile with a stranger at about 5 p. m. last Tuesday.

CAFE MAN TELLS HOW UNION HEADS 'SOLD OUT' RANKS

Bares 'Shakedown' at Racket Trial.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Through Max Rosoff, proprietor of a restaurant on Times square, the state today showed at the trial of eight alleged café racketeers how the officials of a waiters' union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor had "sold out" their members while extorting $3,500 for their own profit. The witness was the extortion victim.

Five defendants, on trial before Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook, are union officials. The state has contended that they, in conspiracy with known gangsters, such as Dutch Schultz and Jules Martin, operated a two day "shakedown" racket from which they derived $2,000,000 annually.

Rosoff, a slight man with a cropped mustache, answered for the most part in monosyllables. He told how he had been induced through fear to pay $3,500 to Louis Beitcher, collection man for the gang, after he had been told he would have to unionize his establishment.

Told to Raise Salaries.

Two of the union's representatives had told him that he would have to raise his wage scale, he said, but after the payment to Beitcher nothing more concerning a wage increase was mentioned.

"After that we never discussed any benefits or any terms," he testified. "No union official even approached me on the subject of a wage increase after that."

Under cross-examination Rosoff admitted that he had entered the payments to Beitcher in his account books as "mortgage payments, salaries, and in different ways," and that he had testified falsely about these entries on his first of three appearances before the grand jury.

Signs, But Pay Stays the Same.

After paying the money to Beitcher he signed a union contract with the officials of local 16, but this did not affect his wage scale, he said.

Rosoff first was approached on July 29, 1933, by Aladar Retek, organizer of local 16, a defendant, he testified.

Retek told him that he desired to organize the employés. He replied that he had no objection to this except that he could not permit it alone —"that I could not do it myself, unless my competitors did the same."

At that time he was paying his waiters $6 a week. The union scale, according to Retek, would be $12.

A picket line was established, but, according to Rosoff, was removed on payment of money to Retek and his associates.

TRUE BILL NAMES A BENEFICIARY OF BIG BOY KENNEDY

CRIMINAL COURT.

Lonnie Guilford, rape, sentenced to three years in the penitentiary by Judge John J. Lupe.

Willie Sherman, alleged pickpocket freed on one of the no schedule bonds recommended by William [Big Boy Kennedy] Cannady, was reported named yesterday in a true bill charging larceny. The grand jury's action was the beginning of proceedings to extradite Sherman from Detroit.

Arrested there under a different name on a stabbing charge, Sherman was identified from fingerprints by the Chicago bureau of identification. Investigation disclosed that Judge Joseph A. Graber of the Municipal court approved the bond last September, while Sherman was awaiting trial on a pocket picking charge.

Cannady, an 11th ward Democratic worker, has been sought for months on a contempt of court citation.

2 JOHN L. LEWIS FOLLOWERS FIGHT TO REGAIN JOBS

A fight for reinstatement as employés of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation was begun here yesterday by two workers at a hearing before a solicitor of the department of labor in the new postoffice building. The workers, George A. Patterson and Mike Ostroski, charge they were dismissed last fall because of union activities.

Patterson testified before Solicitor C. O. Gregory that he was discharged after joining the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers, an affiliate of John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization. He charged that the employés representative plan now in effect in the steel plants "is a farce and represents the company, not the workers."

LIQUOR DEALERS TO MEET.

The National Retail Liquor Package Stores association and the National Wholesale Wine and Liquor Dealers' association will meet with distillers and importers from twenty-one states in the Hotel Sherman Feb. 21 to 24.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—The more abundant life and four resettlement projects for Arkansas, championed by Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, triumphed in the United States senate today, despite efforts of the more conservative Democrats, vainly urging retrenchment to sabotage what they termed "the resettlement dream."

"Pauper Oath" for States.

Senator Joseph W. Bailey [D., S. C.] introduced an amendment providing that no part of the funds could be expended for relief in any state or political subdivision until such state or subdivision filed what would amount to a pauper's oath. The city, county, or state would have to show that it had exhausted its own funds; set out its tax rate, its annual revenues, its indebtedness, the number of its unemployed, etc.; and even then an authority designated by the President would have to find that the agency was in actual need. This was too much for Senator Robinson, so he moved that the senate adjourn.

The chief controversy on the $900,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill, which carries $789,000,000 for relief activities during the remainder of the fiscal year, centered on an amendment by the appropriations committee striking out $15,000,000 for resettlement. After one of the most determined fights in his legislative career by Senator Robinson, the committee amendment was rejected, 42 to 36.

Shows Stand Toward Cash.

The relative insignificance of this proposed cut and the wails and lamentations produced by it, reflected the attitude of the senate and the 75th congress with respect to retrenchment. Of the $15,000,000 proposed to be eliminated, $14,000,000 was intended for resettlement construction and $1,000,000 for administrative expenses in the District of Columbia. Flushed with his great victory, Senator Robinson was more considerate after the $15,000,000 had been voted, and agreed to strike out $1,000,000 "until the bill goes to conference."

Even this concession pained him, however, for when Senator James F. Byrnes [D., S. C.] proposed it, Senator Robinson replied:

"I do not know whether this amendment is a practical retrenchment or not."

While Mr. Robinson was speaking of "practical retrenchment" in terms of $1,000,000 a dozen of his colleagues were waiting to push another amendment to increase the deficiency bill to $1,200,000,000 and many others were considering flood relief and flood control legislation with estimates running as high as $2,000,000,000.

For Ohio Valley Authority.

Senator Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.], one of the administration leaders, is working with the National Resources board, the TVA, and other New Deal power officials on a bill to create an Ohio Valley authority, the dams and power projects of which would cost $2,000,000,000 over a long period. Legislation for more immediate flood relief needs will come much sooner, as soon as the estimates can be made, but the flood disaster was not taken into consideration in the preparation of the pending deficiency bill.

Senator Robinson gave assurances that an adequate flood relief program would be adopted in due time, when he successfully urged defeat of the amendment by Senator Homer T. Bone [D., Wash.] and eleven other northwestern senators to increase the deficiency bill to $1,200,000,000. The effect of this amendment, which was defeated by a voice vote, would have been to add $400,000,000 to the $789,000,000 relief appropriation.

Expects Big Control Work.

Calling a national flood control system "the most gigantic task ever undertaken by the United States," Senator Robinson declared:

"There is no question in my mind that the government will make available, as information and necessity require, funds for this great task. Charitable sources cannot meet the demands of this emergency. The government already is spending millions daily. The aggregate amount which can be used cannot be foretold."

Plans Affecting Arkansas.

Although Senator Robinson took up the cudgels for the Resettlement Administration from the point of view of a nationally minded statesman having the welfare of the whole country at heart, a glance at the record of the appropriations committee's hearings shows that the following projects in the state of Arkansas are involved:

Project—	No. of units.	Total cost.	Ad. funds required.
Wright's Plantation	105	$1,031,315	$ 40,000
Lake View	87	770,777	80,000
Lake Dick	80	578,401	75,000
Arkansas Farm Tenant Security	80	460,544	150,000

Robinson contended that the $14,000,000 was required to complete projects already begun and that without it "utmost confusion and chaos" would result. However, Senator Alva B. Adams [D., Colo], chairman of the appropriations sub-committee which is managing the bill, contended that the additional funds were desired to start new projects.

Big Fund in Use.

"In the first place, it will take not $14,000,000 but $49,000,000 to complete all of the projects which have been initiated," Senator Adams declared. "I have great sympathy with the dream which accompanies the resettlement. The practical working out of the dream, however, has been disappointing. Ninety-one million dollars has gone into these projects and 10,777 families are all that have been taken care of."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] inquired, with impressive politeness, whether it was "necessary for R. A. to spend $289,000 in 14 months for publicity—nearly $300,000 in advertising for clients."

The deficiency bill vote was thrown over until tomorrow.

A stolen automobile in which two men were fleeing from the police was wrecked yesterday at Haddon and Hoyne avenues. One of the men escaped, but the other, Anthony Parowski, 24 years old, 1841 Evergreen avenue, was shot in the right hip by Policeman Clarence Jones of the detective bureau. The car had been stolen from Frank Engelbrecht, 1574 Milwaukee avenue.

REVIVAL OF NRA, WITH CHANGES, ROOSEVELT IDEA

Wages and Hours Control Called Chief Objective.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt indicated clearly today that in his studies of labor and business legislation the question of hours, wages, and child labor prohibitions were of primary concern, and that fair trade practices were separate and of secondary importance.

The President intimated, furthermore, that he planned to go straight ahead with plans for setting up hour and wage standards and child labor controls by simple legislation within the framework of the present constitution, regardless of the growing demand in congress that the issues involved be met by submission of a constitutional amendment to the states.

Basis of Old NRA.

The President said he was continuing his discussions as to prospective legislation to accomplish this purpose, which, in fact, is a revival of the essential features of the invalidated National Recovery act.

His remarks, uttered at a White House press conference, were taken as substantiating the report he was leaning toward a bill reëstablishing the principal provisions of the President's old reëmployment agreements, the so-called "blanket code" negotiated in the Blue Eagle drive in the early days of the NRA.

Constitutional justification of such a statute, according to those with whom the President has discussed it, would be a congressional definition of interstate commerce to be contained in the same act.

The main obstacles which a new statute would have to meet are, first, the objection raised by the court in the NRA decision against congress delegating its powers to the executive, and, second, the court's contention that congress exceeded its own powers over commerce in the breadth of the NRA act itself.

More Details in Law.

Under the plan toward which the President is said to be leaning now the first objection would be answered by congress enacting the labor controls directly without giving the authority over to the executive through a code making system as under the old NRA. An attempt would be made to meet the second through congress' own definition of the powers which the people, through the constitution originally gave it over interstate commerce.

Various other plans either are actively before the President or are being pushed among the coterie of experts who advise him. Among these is one lately advanced by Hugh S. Johnson, author and first administrator of the NRA, and adopted by an expert group within the government to establish the labor controls through the congress' undisputed power of taxation—placing a penalty tax on overlong hours, unduly low wages, and prohibiting child labor entirely.

SENATOR WILLIAMS 'TURNS HEAT' ON FOES HOLDING DOWN 2 JOBS

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—A club is hanging over the heads of several Chicago Democratic senators tonight, held by Senator Louis O. Williams of Clinton, still smarting over the relegation of himself and other downstate Horner supporters to the chairmanship of minor committees.

Last month when the senate organized the president pro tempore, George M. Maypole of Chicago, all but "benched" Williams by giving him the chairmanship of the committee on senatorial reapportionment.

Tonight Williams started his retaliation by presenting a resolution calling for appointment of a committee of five members to investigate whether double jobholders are violating the law by occupying two posts.

Although Williams did not name the senators he is striking at, he mentioned several jobs they hold which identified them to his colleagues. They include Peter P. Kielminski, assistant superintendent of the Bridewell; Frank J. Huckin Jr., of the Cook County Superior court clerk's office; Harold G. Ward, member of the liquor license appeal commission, and John M. Lee, deputy balif of the Municipal court.

FALL RESULTS IN DEATH.

Mrs. Mary Nilan, 65 years old, 260 North Lamon avenue, died in St. Anne's hospital yesterday of complications resulting from injuries received in a fall near her home on Jan. 22.

BRINGS WIFE AND BABY HOME; DIES IN STOVE BLAST

The kitchen fire had gone out when Charles Church brought his wife and their new born daughter so proudly home to 3519 Seminary avenue from the Augustana hospital yesterday. But he put them in the front room, closed the door, and hurried to kindle another fire.

Had he only remembered to have the house warm, there would have been nothing else a husband of 31 could ask. His wife, Anne, was getting her strength back. The baby was perfect. Business was prospering in Church's filling station. It was a joyous moment.

Mrs. Church was rocking her baby when there was an explosion that blew the door open. The oil her husband had used to kindle the fire had exploded. He was in flames from head to foot.

As his young wife and their elder daughter, Mary Lou, 2 years old, watched helplessly, he fled to the back porch, where Charles Clark, a roomer in the home, tried in vain to smother the flames with a blanket. Then, with the flames burning more fiercely than ever, Church ran back into the house. He fell dead at his wife's feet.

Yes, Constipation Is Serious, But It Can't Poison You! Say Doctors

Modern doctors now say that the old idea of poisons getting into your blood from constipation is BUNK. They claim that constipation swells up the bowels, causing pressure on nerves in the digestive tract. This nerve pressure is what causes frequent bilious spells, dizziness, headaches, upset stomach, dull tired out feeling, sleepless nights, coated tongue, bad taste and loss of appetite.

Don't suffer hours or even days longer than necessary. You must GET THAT PRESSURE OFF THE NERVES TO GET RELIEF. Flush the intestinal system. When offending wastes are gone the bowels return to normal size and nerve pressure stops. Almost at once you feel marvelously refreshed, blues vanish and life looks bright again.

That is why so many doctors are now insisting on gentle but QUICK action. That is why YOU should insist on Adlerika. This efficient intestinal evacuant contains SEVEN carminative and cathartic ingredients. It acts on the stomach as well as the entire intestinal tract. It relieves stomach GAS at once and often removes bowel congestion in half an hour. No violent action, no after effects, just QUICK results. Recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years.

FREE Trial size of Adlerika will be mailed FREE to any adult. Send name and address to Dept. 180, ADLERIKA, ST. PAUL, MINN.

NEW YORK STATE HAS A BABY BRIDE, BUT SHE'S AGE 12

That's Worse, She Says of Tennessee Wife, 9.

Watertown, N. Y., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The marriage of a 12 year old girl and a 19 year old Watertown youth who had been "keeping company" for a year was revealed today.

"I wouldn't want to be separated from Stanley for anything," the girl, Leona E. Roshie, said, as she told of her marriage to Stanley S. Backus at Carthage last Jan. 15.

Her mother, Mrs. Joseph J. Roshie, of Watertown, who herself married at 16, approves the wedding.

"I would fight any attempt to separate my daughter from her husband," she said. "They are happily married."

Talks of Sneedville Girl.

As for the Sneedville, Tenn., child bride, she said:

"I thought that Stanley and I were bad enough, but that is worse yet." Nine year old Eunice Winstead Johns was married to a 22 year old Tennessee mountaineer, Charles Johns, two weeks ago in Sneedville.

Meanwhile the girl, preparing to "go housekeeping," said she was "too happy," adding, however, "I want people to mind their own business."

One of Eight Children.

Mrs. Backus, a fifth grade pupil in school, is one of eight children. She said she gave her age as 18 when the marriage license was obtained. Her husband, employed at an air brake factory, said he was 21. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Backus. The Rev. William K. Bradshaw, Methodist minister, performed the ceremony.

Both parents were unaware of the wedding until afterward. The couple is now living at the home of the bride's parents.

HUSBAND 'READS' WIFE'S MIND AND SLAPS HER FACE

Life with Hugh Breen Jr. was full of surprises for Mrs. Maxine Leola Breen, 18 years old, 742 East 80th street, according to her bill for divorce filed yesterday in the Superior court by Attorney Victor Frohlich. Soon after their marriage on Feb. 14, 1934, the bill stated, Breen warned his wife not to think of other men. Being a clever mind reader he would know about it.

"One day he came home and without warning slapped his wife's face," the bill declared. "That was for thinking of another man," Breen told her. When Mrs. Breen denied the charge indignantly, he "slapped her again for not admitting the truth."

Hold Stepfather When Child Driver Kills Girl

Danville, Ill., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The stepfather of a 13 year old boy driver of an automobile which fatally injured Irene Sharp, seven, was detained by police today under a police provision of a state law forbidding minors under 15 to operate motor vehicles.

[Associated Press Wirephotos.]

Sneedville, Tenn., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—While a storm of protest raged unceasingly about the heads of officials because of the marriage of 9 year old Eunice Winstead to Charlie Johns, 22, legislators today acted to prevent a repetition of such weddings.

Admittedly officials can do nothing in the present case. But legislators at Nashville don't want such a thing to happen again. They are irked by the "hill-billy" jibes from other states.

So today two bills were on file which would prevent a reptition of such instances. The couple were married by the Rev. Walter Lamb, Baptist preacher.

MARY BELLE'S MOTHER DROPS ANNULMENT SUIT

Mary Belle Spencer, attorney, yesterday dismissed the suit she had brought in Superior court to annul the marriage of her daughter, Mary Belle Jr., to James Edward Wright.

A report that there would be a reconciliation between Mary Belle Jr. and her mother failed to take place.

Mary Belle Jr. was 16 and her husband was 21 when they eloped to Crown Point last Aug. 27 and were married. Her mother brought the annulment action on the ground that Wright, a husky former high school athlete, was tubercular and hadn't given the right ages for himself and his bride. Neither of the Wrights were in court yesterday when Judge John C. Lewe authorized the dismissal. Last night they were missing from their home at 1228 Otto street, Chicago Heights.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Frank Ridgway

Planting Is Begun

February 2, 1937.

GARDENERS at the Tribune's Wheaton Experimental farm believe in the old saw that "the early bird gets the worm" and already are starting seeds indoors. Harvesting dates of both flowers and vegetables are made many weeks earlier through the use of a greenhouse at the farm.

This week both flower and vegetable seeds will be started in flats in the greenhouse so that slow growing plants will have plenty of time to develop before it is warm enough to set them out in the open garden. The planting list includes annual and perennial flowers and an assortment of vegetables.

In Flats and Pots.

In the flower flats seeds of such annuals as snapdragons, petunias, and carnations will be sown, and such perennials as delphinium and columbine. Bulbs of English tuberous begonias will be started in pots filled with a mixture of leaf mold, sand, and a little garden loam. The bulbs do best in a light soil where there is plenty of leaf mold, according to the head gardener.

Tomato seeds will be planted in greenhouse flats this week to allow plenty of time for them to be transplanted indoors in pots before they are finally set outdoors. By starting the tomatoes this early the gardeners say they are able to develop plants to the point where small tomatoes will be forming by the time they are to be transplanted in the open garden.

Celery, parsley, and pepper seeds will be planted this week.

Cottonseed Meal for Steers.

Cottonseed meal recently was added to the rations of the beef steers on feed at the Yorkville farm as an additional protein supplement. The 3 year old steers are getting two pounds each of cottonseed meal a day and the 2 year olds one pound each.

The steers have been making good gains all winter. Mild weather has enabled them to convert more of their feed into fat than was possible for the steers on feed last winter when the cold made it necessary to use up much energy in keeping their bodies warm.

Unsplit Poplar Burns O. K.

The portable buzzsaw outfit used at the Tribune's Wheaton Experimental farm, where dead tree tops in the woods and around the homesteads are salvaged, has given the farmers an abundance of material for use in their firewood tests this winter. In summing up their observations the other day one of the men at the farm said that poplar trees make good firewood, if unsplit. Poplar trees grow fast and the wood is soft. If split it burns too fast and, as firewood is generally split, poplar has a bad name.

He added that if the fireplace is big enough to burn whole logs, poplar makes a good firewood.

The Wheaton farm men find also that the best stove wood is unsplit oak limbs and tops, which are small enough to poke in the stove and burn slowly enough not to require continuous stoking.

WHY TAX PAYMENTS DROP.

Collections of 1935 real estate taxes, at the penalty date Monday night, were below the level of the two previous levies at similar dates. County officials and tax experts express surprise that this should be true in a period of increasing general prosperity.

Their surprise must be largely rhetorical, for to any one who has kept in touch with the chaotic tax situation in this county such a slump in payments was to be expected. These are the reasons:

1. The bills are shot through with illegal levies. Tax attorneys advised their clients to withhold ten per cent of their 1935 payments, and expect to knock out approximately that proportion of the levy through rate objections. They invalidated 7 per cent of the 1934 levies in the County court, and are asking further reductions of the Supreme court. As illegal levies become the rule rather than the exception more and more taxpayers are withholding tax payments and will file objections.

2. The 1935 real estate tax bills were 20 per cent higher than those for 1933, the collection of which, in May, 1935, marked the first upturn in tax collections. Rising taxes always discourage payments. Payment of a $200 bill may seem possible to a home owner, if he scrimps and tries. Payment of a $240 bill appears impossible to a marginal class of such taxpayers, and they don't try.

3. Tax dodging is contagious and will be so long as it goes on without substantial penalties. If your neighbor did not pay last year and suffered no apparent penalty, you fail to pay this year. This will continue until some resolute effort is made to collect taxes.

In sum, tax collections slumped this year because taxpayers had every motive not to pay, and few motives to pay. They will be still worse next year if local governments continue to drift in their present leaderless course.

JUGGERNAUTS' VICTORY.

Federal Judge John J. Parker, sitting at Columbia, S. C., has enjoined that state from enforcing on its principal highways a state law restricting the weight of trucks to ten tons and their width to 90 inches.

There are two disturbing features in the report, the first of which is the decision itself. It is inconceivable that states have not the legal power to protect their highways against overloading, which an abundance of engineering evidence shows to be responsible for the destruction of road surfaces, or against excessively large vehicles which menace the safety of other drivers.

Judge Parker held that the state law set up a wall around South Carolina, defeating the purposes of federal grants in aid for a national highway system. The interstate trucking companies which got the injunction complained that most states allow trucks 96 inches wide, and that the lower South Carolina limit barred most of their trucks from that state.

It is to be hoped that the court's ruling hinged on this deviation of the South Carolina law from the general standard, and was not based upon a general denial of the state's right of regulation.

A second disturbing feature was the intervention in the case of two railroads as co-defendants with the state. Truck regulation is desirable as a safety measure and a protection against highway destruction. It is distinctly undesirable if it is going to be used to hamstring competition with other forms of transportation, and the railroads' appearance was an unwholesome indication that the South Carolina statute, by intent or accident, did that.

RETURN OF AN OLD STAR.

Old timers last week got a thrill out of the stock market. At a time when it gave every indication of wanting to go down because of the stupendous losses occasioned by the floods and the unexpected prolongation of the automobile strike an old time leader struck out for itself and gave the most impressive demonstration of strength in years. The titillation of veterans arose from the fact that it was United States Steel, or "big steel," as it is known in Wall street, which was putting on the show. It was as if an old time actor had come out of retirement while the theater was in the doldrums and scored a hit.

In pre-war markets Steel common was not only a leader. It was the leader. From 1901, when very watery, it came off the Curb, and James R. Keene, incomparable manipulator, under contract with J. P. Morgan the elder, had created a market for the stock, it had been the outstanding speculative medium. Frequently the transactions in steel would amount to one-quarter of the total trade on the New York Stock exchange. The fluctuations in the stock affected market attitudes and influenced the price of securities listed on exchanges everywhere. United States Steel was the biggest industrial concern, its stock was widely held, and the steel industry is so related to capital investment that the quotation on Steel at any time was believed to give an accurate picture of the status and prospects of general trade in the United States.

During the tremendous stock parade of the twenties big steel lost its preëminence in the market. General Motors, radio, a number of utilities and investment trusts became principal vehicles for speculative activity. In the ensuing depression and bear market "X" was far from being the most frequently seen symbol on the ticker tape. And in the revival of the last three years United States Steel has lagged far behind. Other companies in its own industry were beating it in the extent of productive capacity employed and in profits. The stock did not advance as other steels did. Many said it was through.

But last week big steel came back into its own. On Tuesday the stock had closed at 85⅞. On Wednesday, with sales totaling 30,400, the stock advanced to 88½. On Thursday 78,200 shares changed hands and the closing price was 91⅝. On Friday the final quotation was 94½ and in Saturday's half session the advance was continued to 96¾. That is a rise of 11 points in four days. All this was done while Miss Perkins was scolding, Mr. Sloan was having a bad cold, the workers at Flint were still sitting and the lower Mississippi was waiting for the superflood. We are happy to applaud the stirring performance of a great old actor under such disturbing conditions.

THE ELUSIVE BIG BOY.

Chicago police, with the aid of their colleagues in Detroit, have found Willie Sherman, the missing pickpocket. Willie has been missing since last September, when he was released from jail on a no schedule, or straw, bond and forgot to appear in court.

He got the bond through the good offices of William Cannady, better known as Big Boy Kennedy. Big Boy qualified as a liaison agent between the underworld and the law by activity as a Democratic worker in the 11th ward.

Police are looking for Big Boy, too, but, unlike Sherman, he apparently has not been forced to any extensive travels to avoid them. He is reported from time to time about his usual haunts, but, somehow, whenever any one approaches with a warant, he has just left.

Big Boy necessarily had certain connections in the Municipal court to achieve what success he did in the bond racket. Court employés do not as a rule prevail on judges to grant no schedule bonds presented by strangers. They reserve such favors for their friends.

It may be assumed, in the absence of any contrary evidence, that the police are sincere in their desire to lay hands on Big Boy. They normally have little sympathy either with pickpockets or with those who put them back on the streets without formality of trial. Their quest for Big Boy might be successful if, while looking for him, they also kept an eye open for whoever has been warning him of their approach.

Big Boy will be easy quarry the moment politicians stop protecting him.

SUBURBAN SERVICE.

Not infrequently a representative of one of the steam railways which offer suburban service in the Chicago area calls at THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE to demonstrate that editorials on this subject are not going unheeded. The railway is doing its level best to answer the public demand for more efficient service and greater speeds. Admittedly, the accomplishment has not been spectacular—three minutes here and four minutes there—but the aggregate shows a movement in the right direction.

As an instance, the Chicago and North Western is able to show that within four years the schedules of trains operating to West Chicago have been jointly shortened by one hour westbound and one and one-half hours eastbound. Between Chicago and Waukegan, northbound service has been improved to the extent of one hour and forty minutes, while southbound trains have clipped two and one-quarter hours from their time tables. Between Chicago and Crystal Lake there has been a united acceleration amounting to one and one-half hours in each direction. The present facilities offer limitations.

During certain hours of the day Chicago's stations are undoubtedly crowded, and it is growing increasingly evident that the railways offering suburban service must produce some broader plans. The question of space is becoming all important, and no other railroad can meet this problem with additional trackage as did the Illinois Central. The dead-end station is perhaps the outstanding ailment. As each train is discharged it must be backed or pulled from the depot, thus doubling the trackage required by a through station. Next, there is the innate clumsiness of steam operation, and the necessity for constructing platforms that will accommodate both through and suburban trains running on the same tracks.

But there remain some features that can be improved without a major operation. The public is entitled to an experiment with lightweight, streamlined, Diesel driven units that can save minutes at each stop by superior acceleration and deceleration. Entraining and detraining facilities at the suburban stations may be substantially improved, and this remark would also apply to the doorways of suburban coaches. The necessity for entering the train in Indian file certainly wastes time. Schedules must be maintained "on the dot."

The efforts of the railways are appreciated. Their good faith is not doubted, but a metropolitan viewpoint must be substituted for the "big town" atmosphere that in some way pervades our suburban service.

LOOK HOMEWARD, UNCLE.

[New York Post.]

Uncle Sam's federal trade commission has just cited several automobile manufacturers and merchandise finance companies for misrepresenting the interest rate on deferred payments. The commission charges that the rate is said to be 6 per cent when, because interest is paid in advance and the principal reduced in monthly instalments, the actual interest rate is really about 12 per cent.

On this point the manufacturers and the finance companies have a swell comeback. They need only point to Uncle Sam's own Federal Housing administration, which has been carrying on a national campaign advertising 5 per cent interest rates on housing loans—although the rate is actually about 10 per cent, because these housing loans also are discounted in advance and reduced by monthly instalments.

Two years ago the Post pointed out that the Federal Housing administration was misleading borrowers with its "5 per cent interest" announcements. The question was brought up in congress, commented on by many other newspapers. But the FHA has gone its way unperturbed.

So, if the federal trade commission is really out for reform, it should start right on the home grounds, in the offices of FHA. It is scarcely becoming to criticize private finance companies for a practice in which the federal government itself has set the pace.

STEAMBOAT DAYS.

In the great flood of 1927 every steamboat available was pressed into service to pick up refugees. Among these was the Tennessee Belle, last of the steam packets on the lower river. Capt. Dick Dicharry tells many stories of the Belle's rescue work, but the one he likes best is that of a lanky, frightened darky who had been marooned on a narrow patch of soil—all that was left of the levee in front of his cabin. "We stopped the boat," says Capt. Dick, "and I yelled: 'What are you, boy; a refugee?' . . . 'Nah, sah! cap'n. Not me,' was the answer. 'I'se just a po' colored boy runnin' from de flood.'" . . . Many of the refugees were, by fitting coincidence, taken to the Rufuge Oil company's warehouse at Vicksburg. Now, says Capt. Dick, all the darkies of that section, and many white folk too, think of the concern as the Refugee Oil company.

INLAND TOWN.

The April rains have overleaped their bounds—
A weather forecast is too frail a thing
To leash them—and tonight the street resounds
With nautic lore, for homespun vessels bring
New dreams, new tongues but partly understood:
The starboard watch, the weather roll, the lee,—
To every lad in every neighborhood
The springtime has bequeathed a little sea. . . .

Then lo, it is accomplished; though oppressed
By rusting toil, I break tryst with the land
And go down to the sea in ships that rest
White sails in the hollow of an ocean's hand . . .
Scenting a briny wind, a harbor's musk,
I watch the sailors swagger through the dusk. . . .

Grandpap lived in the Kentucky hill country before he crossed the Ohio to settle in Little Egypt. One of his favorite anecdotes was about old Aunt Fan and the new cook stove which Uncle Jed brought to her after a trip down to Frankfort with a raft of logs. The old lady was delighted with the improvement, although she did not understand its workings. "Jed," she demanded as the old fellow was setting it up, "how in tarnation am I a-goin' to lift that thing on and off the fire when you and the boys ain't around the house?" Little Egypt's Grandson.

THE TELLER'S QUARTER.

I have been amused by the various guesses, etc., about the missing quarter in the bank. As a former bankman I know such things do happen; likewise that if depositors were careful in making out deposit slips the teller's life would be so much sweeter. Have a look behind the scenes. Most deposits are made in the last hour to the glee of the receiving teller. The poor guy in the cage works like a squirrel, but the line never seems to thin. There isn't time to go over all items and the customer's footing is granted correct. . . . A quarter's brushed off the counter (sounds like a quarter). No chance to pick it up until the last man in line has stepped away. Now the fun begins. The clearing house reports errors in the footing of John Busyman's deposit ticket. . . . At the end of the day a few errors are adjusted, but the next morning finds the poor teller going over every deposit and checking with his large book. Any difference at the end of the day is caught up in a "Tellers' Over and Short Account." At least, that's the way it used to be done in the larger banks.

HOUSE DUST AND ASTHMA.

IN asthma we are not dealing with a new disease. Sir John Floyer published an excellent treatise on the subject in 1698, in which he described his own symptoms. More than a hundred years later another Englishman, John Bostock, associated the symptoms with the grasses which were cut and cured as hay. Another half century elapsed before physicians acquired even a fair understanding of the skin irritations caused by dust and pollen.

Certainly the relation of house dust to asthmatic symptoms was not recognized until a few years ago. What are some of the offending substances? Among the most common are silk and wool from draperies, hangings, cushions, clothing, etc., various cleaning powders used about the house, and feathers and dandruff, either of human or animal origin. In addition there may be unknown factors which cannot be identified, but which nevertheless may be responsible for difficult breathing or some intractable types of eczema—all of allergic origin.

A woman entered the hospital for a thorough checkup in relation to asthma. At the time of her admission she was struggling for breath and the only relief obtained was through hypodermic injections of adrenalin. Skin tests were begun promptly and on the third day the victim was entirely free from symptoms, despite the fact that nothing in a curative way had been attempted. There was no return of the paroxysms while she remained in the institution.

On going carefully into the patient's history it was discovered that she had been well a year previously, when she spent a few weeks visiting friends—a considerable distance from home. Evidence pointed so conclusively to the fact that there was something about her living quarters that served to pull the trigger and thus inaugurate the attacks that a careful cleaning of every room, including the basement, was undertaken. Dust samples were secured from every nook and cranny. In addition, specimens were obtained from the vacuum cleaner, and more than half these collections gave a violent reaction when applied to the patient's skin.

However, no relief resulted when she was isolated from all the dust particles which could be identified. All the substances mentioned above were removed, including orris root face powder. A pet dog was boarded out temporarily. But promptly upon the patient's return to her residence symptoms reappeared. Arrangements were made to have her live in a neighboring hotel for a few weeks to give a practical test to the house dust theory. Again she was entirely symptom free.

The question then presented itself. what could be done to permit this woman to live in comfort in her own domicile? It was finally decided to make an extract of the pooled house dust in the hope that the injection of this material would render her nonsensitive. The treatment lasted little more than a month, the sufferer residing meanwhile in a hotel. She was then allowed to visit her apartment for a few hours each day, the period being lengthened gradually until at the end of a week she gave up her hotel room. This case has been followed for three years, and to date there has been no return of symptoms.

Within the last few years much attention has been given to the importance of a dust free room in households where one member has asthma, the remedy for which does not lie immediately at hand. Most sufferers are comfortable within a few hours after entering such a space. Of course, ventilation must be provided, and for this purpose air filters are placed in the windows. It is not assumed that the room harbors no dust, but the reduction in the number of particles in the air is so great that the result appears to be almost miraculous.

House dust asthma sometimes increases during the winter season. This is because most of us spend longer hours within doors and those who are susceptible absorb larger quantities of the irritating elements. If there is an asthmatic in the family, routine cleaning of floors, carpets, woodwork, walls, etc., may not be sufficient, and more thorough and complete methods of dust removal may be necessary.

LEUKEMIA.

A. F. writes: This may be a case of an amateur trying to give information to a professional, but here goes: It is about leukemia, where the white blood cells destroy the red ones. I am humbly suggesting that it might be worth while to investigate its relation to glanders in horses.

A friend of mine was ill, and for a long time nobody could tell me what the diagnosis was. After hearing his symptoms I went to the encyclopedia and found that they were those of glanders. He had been on a farm previous to developing the disease. He died of leukemia. If you consider this worthy of research I shall be happy to have been of help.

REPLY.

Would that you were correct, but I am afraid that you are not. The two diseases cannot be associated in the relationship of cause and effect. Glanders does affect human beings, but the organism [bacillus mallei] is known and we have a fairly successful treatment. Leukemia is as yet an enigma.

TIC NEURALGIA.

J. H. D. writes: About ten years ago I had a nerve severed to relieve tic neuralgia. For several months now I have had pain in the lower jaw when I eat or talk. Would infected teeth or sinuses cause this? Could it be tic neuralgia again?

REPLY.

Possibly—if the nerve was cut outside the skull. Nerves can and will regenerate in time. In your case, the nature of the pain should determine the diagnosis. If it is constant or aching, teeth and sinuses should be investigated as pain of this sort is not tic douloureux.

NIGHT SWEATS.

Mrs. H. writes: My husband is 23 years old, weighs 165 pounds, and is 6 feet tall. His health and appetite are excellent but he has night sweats. His clothing and the bed will sometimes be so wet in the morning that he gets cold chills. Is this a symptom of anything serious?

REPLY.

The condition may not be serious at all, but to be on the safe side persuade friend husband to have a thorough physical examination. Nervous conditions, rickets, and tuberculosis should be investigated.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA.—The second year of the Philippine commonwealth, when new or increased taxation measures enacted in order to meet the growing expenses of a burgeoning government came into effect, is being ushered in by a series of tax strikes.

The strike wave started in Manila and spread to some of the provinces. Three kinds of specific levies are the objects of the protests. First of these is the 66⅔ per cent increase in slaughterhouse fees. Second is the doubling of the tax on food venders occupying stalls in the public markets. The third is the merchant's tax of 1½ per cent levied on food sales, but only against merchants grossing over $100 a quarter—which exempts nearly three-fourths of the merchants.

First to resort to strike was the Cattlemen's Association of Manila against the tax on meat slaughtered in the municipal abattoirs. In all Philippine towns the slaughtering business is a municipal monopoly for reasons of health and sanitation. The tax from meat slaughter is a substantial portion of the total incomes of the local governments, hence their 1937 budgets, drawn up and approved before the effectiveness of the ordinance, were invariably based on estimates which included the increased abattoir fees.

Manila cattlemen, in striking, alleged [1] the Manila ordinance was passed without their knowledge, and [2] the increase should be graduated and not lumped. They demanded postponement of the tax for at least three months, with its full amount delayed to Jan. 1, 1938. The Manila board and the Manila cattlemen have been haggling, the cattlemen resuming the slaughtering of animals only when they feel the board is weakening. The meat strike has its counterparts in many other towns with corresponding effects.

Other dealers in food products, getting their cue from the meatmen, struck against both the privilege and the percentage taxes. Their plea was short—too exorbitant. As these are purely commonwealth taxes, the protest is directed against the central government. The strikes, in many instances and in many towns, resulted for days in entirely empty public markets. Most of the strikers were not aware of the exemption under the percentage tax.

The strikes, some fiscal officials admit, show there is something wrong in the manner of enacting and collecting them. From now on the commonwealth will gradually increase old taxes and open up new tax sources.

MOTORCYCLE RIDERS.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you please advise me [1] if it is illegal and in violation of any Chicago ordinance or state law for three boys [all minors] to ride on a motorcycle [no side car attached] on a Chicago street?

Also please advise me [2] if it is a trafic violation within city or state for these three boys on a motorcycle to overtake and pass an automobile on the right which is driving on the right side of a three lane concrete highway [each lane 10 feet wide] in Chicago?

1. "It shall be unlawful for more than one person to ride upon any bicycle propelled by human power upon any street, or for any person to ride upon any motorcycle other than upon a seat attached to said vehicle." [Chicago City Code, 2001.]

2. "When overtaking on the right is permitted": [a] The driver of a vehicle may overtake and pass upon the right of another vehicle which is making or about to make a left turn; [b] the driver of a vehicle may overtake and, allowing sufficient clearance, pass another vehicle proceeding in the same direction either upon the left or upon the right of a roadway with unobstructed pavement of sufficient width for four or more lines of moving trafic when such movement can be made in safety." THE BULK OF THE BUILDING CODE.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—In comments appearing from time to time in the press concerning the proposed building code, emphasis seems to be given to its bulk. The number of words contained is increasing in recent estimates.

A speaker at the recent dinner given to Ald. James J. McDermott by the Illinois Society of Architects referred to a "stack of copy a foot and a half high."

The proposed code is a document of approximately 275,000 words. This includes chapters of regulations to be administered by the board of health, bureau for the inspection of steam boilers, unfired pressure vessels and cooling plants, and the fire department, as well as by the department of buildings.

The entire code can be contained in a five and one-half by eight inch volume, less than an inch in thickness. This statement is made to reassure those who have expressed dismay at the bulk of the mimeographed copy.

Editor, Commission for Revising the Building Code of Chicago.

A LIVING FORCE.

LONDON, England, Jan. 19.—Thank you for your courtesy and generosity in giving so much space in your issue of Jan. 3 to my letter on the abdication of King Edward VIII.

You may be interested to learn that I have been kept busy for the last week acknowledging numerous letters from your readers. Almost without exception, these have expressed appreciation of an independent English viewpoint, and I feel that this justifies your policy of affording free expression to opinions which the English press, understandably enough, dared not countenance. It is encouraging to feel that, when our common heritage of free speech is in pawn on one side of the Atlantic, it is still a living force on the other.

THE MYSTERY TAX.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—As individual cab drivers we are required to pay the following amount of tax each year: State license, $17; vehicle tax, $16; insurance bond, $180; stand license, $5; motor inspection, $5; chauffeur license, $5. And now, since Mayor Kelly's administration, we are required to pay an additional mystery tax or wheel tax amounting to $50 each year.

We have tried just about every known means of finding out why and wherefore of this wheel tax but without success. I think that you will agree we are entitled to know why we are paying it.

DRIVER.

TO REDUCE OHIO FLOODS.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Although greatly excessive rainfall promoted the Ohio river to its highest recorded crest, there would seem to be little doubt that each of its floods originates in the Pennsylvania mountains.

A glance at a map will show a great bend in the Ohio west and north of Pittsburgh, from Peaver, Pa., to Wellsville, O. Along this bend the Ohio is only 80 to 100 miles from Lake Erie. It would seem possible that a large volume of the source water of all Ohio river floods could be pumped from this bend upward and overland through aqueducts into Lake Erie, thus relieving the balance, and major portion, of the Ohio river valley. It would then be on its own, handling only its own adjacent watersheds.

The cost, of course, would be tremendous, but the cost of each and every successive flood is tremendous, and occurs over and over again.

GEORGE H. RODGER.

ARKS FOR MODERN NOAHS.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—A friend and I, discussing the current flood, decided that some one ought to encourage automobile trailer manufacturers to offer riverside residents for insurance and pleasure [and perhaps others for pleasure alone] what might be called an amphibian—a trailer that could be used on wheels for land travel and on floats [powered either by an outboard motor or a removable automobile motor] for safety in floods and for leisurely houseboat tours of our inland waterways at other times.

The thought is submitted for whatever it may be worth, even at the risk of increasing our already large vagabond population and necessitating trafic cops on the rivers as well as the roads.

SOME BLAMING GOV. HORNER FOR DELAYS BY HOUSE

Flood Relief, Auto Driver License Urged.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 2.—[Special.] —In true groundhog fashion, the Illinois general assembly merely stuck out its nose today and then crawled back into the state of hibernation that has characterized it ever since it went through the gestures of opening the regular session on Jan. 4.

The house of representatives was the only chamber that held a real meeting this morning and its only business was the introduction of sixty-seven bills. That total in itself fell far below the forecasts of activity which were that between 200 and 300 new measures would be presented at the first opportunity this year for that sort of thing. Then the leaders decided that tomorrow will be another do-nothing day followed by a recess for another week.

Say Horner Delays Action.

Gov. Horner's name was mentioned in connection with both causes of this inactivity. It was said that his open opposition to hasty action on flood relief put a damper on the principal chance for lively oratory. And it was charged that the appointment of the committees of the house —without which it cannot operate— had been delayed to give him an opportunity to pass on the list proposed by Speaker Louie E. Lewis.

The one bit of action most nearly approaching the transaction of public business did concern the flood. A resolution by Rep. E. J. McCabe of Chicago, urging the federal government to provide flood control for the Ohio river, was adopted. But the one bill for a state appropriation for victims of the present waning flood in southern Illinois—which Gov. Horner maintains is unnecessary—was left lying on the speaker's table.

Want $8,000,000 Fund.

This was a proposal for a 3 million dollar appropriation—what in effect was the combination of several pleas for smaller amounts — and it was signed by seven members from districts in the flood stricken section of the state. They were Paul Powell [Golconda], R. R. Randolph [Harrisburg], S. O. Dale [Fairfield], Fred A. Reaville [Flatrock], I. A. Palmer [West Frankfort], and Baker McAlpin [West Frankfort]. All except McAlpin are Republicans, but this fact is not believed to have any bearing on the general Democratic attitude against any appropriation.

The coming of most of the bills introduced in the house had been heralded for some time. Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg of Chicago, Rpublican floor leader, and F. W. Lewis of Robinson, one of the downstate Democratic leaders, joined in presenting the bill for the preadjudication of the validity of tax rates and tax levies as a means of avoiding jolts to the local taxing bodies such as those caused by the courts in recent years. The bill is similar to the plan considered in the 1935 session, providing for confirmation proceedings brought by the county clrk before the county judge.

Schnackenberg also had a set of three bills designed to remove from Illinois business men the handicap of the 3 per cent sales tax when they compete for public business in materials, supplies and equipment against dealers in other states. The bills would provide for the addition of 3 per cent to bids submitted by non-Illinois concerns.

For Autoists' Licensing.

Representative Edward P. O'Grady of Chicago sought to introduce as house bill No. 1 the automobile drivers' license bill recently agreed upon at a Chicago conference between representatives of the state highway department, the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Keep Chicago Safe committee, the Chicago Motor club, and other forces interested in public safety. It wound up as H. B. 6, with the companion financial responsibility bill as H. B. 7.

Representative Pierce Shannon of Chicago brought in the two bills necessary to permit women to sit on Illinois juries. They are minus the referendum defect that caused the Supreme court to knock out the Elrod law a few years ago.

Would End Wooden Cars.

Shannon also had the first of two bills echoing the Granville avenue electric road crash in Chicago. His bill would authorize the state commerce commission to put an end to the use of wooden cars on such lines. O'Grady had a similar bill.

Representative Peter C. Granata of Chicago introduced a bill for the emasculation of men convicted of raping young girls. Representative Dennis J. Collins had a bill to make any participation in a kidnaping punishable by death. Robert M. Woodward of Chicago had another for the imprisonment of any person paying a ransom.

Blame Financial Worry for Woman's Death Leap

A verdict of suicide while despondent over financial matters was returned yesterday by the coroner's jury that investigated the death of Mrs. Lulu E. Grisham, 50 years old, who plunged from the roof of the thirteen story apartment building at 11 West Division street where she lived, late Monday night. Her daughters, Mary Ava and Aleen, testified that their mother had been worrying over her inability to collect $1,000 loaned to a relative.

NEW SPAIN TO BE MADE LIKE ITALY, FRANCO REVEALS

Dodges Question of King if Rebels Win.

New York, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Gen. Francisco Franco, Spain's insurgent dictator-designate, today outlined a program for a Spanish totalitarian state modeled on Italy, a concordat with the Catholic church, and popular reforms in reply to questions cabled by Roy W. Howard, editor of the New York World-Telegram, and published by that newspaper in a copyrighted article today."

GEN. FRANCO.

Gen. Franco did not answer two of the questions. One of these asked whether he would support a constitutional monarchy with a reconvened congress, and what limits he would place on suffrage. The other asked when Franco expected to capture Madrid.

Plans Totalitarian State.

Following are the highlights of the other questions and the answers:

Q.—Are you personally a proponent of Fascism? And, in the event of your victory, will Spain become a Fascist or totalitarian state? A.—I am an admirer of the way in which Fascism has stemmed the advance of communism in many countries. . . . When the victory in which I have absolute confidence crowns the efforts of our troops, the new Spain will progress on the lines of a totalitarian state in accordance at the same time with the traditions of her history and with modern theories adaptable to her vigorous national characteristics.

Q.—What broad form of government do you believe most Spaniards want? A.—We wish to establish peace and law and order so that it may be possible to develop the country on progressive lines. We are going to create a Spain for all and we shall not close the doors of the state upon those who come forward unreservedly and without mischievous intentions."

Blames Election Frauds.

Q. — If republicanism failed in Spain to what do you ascribe failure?

A. "The republic failed in Spain because it did not carry out its promises to the people and because it did not respect the spirit or letter of the constitution, or the foundations of the political system on which it was based. The result of the [February, 1936] elections were falsified or even reversed, in order to give a majority to the parties of the Popular Front, and anarchy, injustice, and crime were let loose by those in power."

Q.—Are you a Free Mason? And what would be your program vis a vis the Catholic church and its former ecclesiastical and economic status. A.—I am not a Free Mason, and my supporters are as strongly opposed as myself to all connections with the Grand Orient and with secret societies which in Spain devoted themselves to revolutionary activities and strongly influenced certain political circles. I have already declared that our soldiers fight for liberty of conscience and respect of religious beliefs and national tradition. . . .

Concordat to Be Made.

Q.—Would you force separation of church and state in Spain? A.—Relations between the church and government of the future Spain will be defined in due course by a concordat.

Q.—What are you offering Spain calculated to improve social, labor, and agrarian conditions, safeguard from exploitation the under-privileged classes, and increase education? A.—The family and the workshop will be the basis for the new Spanish society, and the family, the workshop, the corporation of the municipality, province, and region will be the principal wheels in the machinery of the new state. The future Spain will be comparable to a vast family without masters, serfs, plutocrats, or proletarians. It will banish class hatred and foreign intrigue from its soil and will be founded upon social justice. . . . Our aim is to stamp out avoidable hardship in a country that is sufficiently rich to give profitable employment to all who live in it. . . .

Q.—Would you consent to the independence of Catalonia and do you think Catalonia could be restored without another civil war? A.— . . . If we left Catalonia to the fate which has overtaken it the historical unity of Spain would be destroyed, for Catalonia is a part of Spain. The world already knows something of the terrible suffering experienced by Catalonia under Red rule. . . .

Q.—Will you state the considerations motivating Italy and Germany coming to your support? Has Italy or Germany been promised concessions? A.—Moral support lent to us by Germany and Italy is due to the fact that they understand the gravity of the communist menace and appreciate the purport of our crusade in the defense of civilization. We have neither given nor promised concessions of any kind, territorial or otherwise, to any one.

Q.—What is your attitude toward the Anglo-Italian pact specifying that the "integrity of present territories of Spain shall, in all circumstances, remain intact and unmodified?". A.—The clause is in harmony with the principles which the new Spain will determinedly uphold.

Destruction Aim of Foes.

Q.—It is reported that victory of either faction will mean early dissension and probably another civil war within the ranks of the victors. To what extent is this fear justified? A.— . . . Our enemies are united only by purely destructive aims to such an extent that strife breaks out among them as soon as they cease, if only momentarily, from serving that purpose; while we are out not only to destroy communism in Spain but to build on permanent and just foundations the structure of the new Spain. Whatever the differences may be between those in the ranks of our army, they are joined together by high ideals . . . by the wish and determination to save Spain, and die, if necessary, for a Spain that will be both great and free, . . . I have full confidence in the men behind me, and I know that they are firmly loyal to their leader. No one on the other side can say the same except with a whip in his hand.

GUN COTTON CATCHES FIRE IN CALUMET CITY; BLASTS REND FACTORY

Drums filled with gun cotton exploded with terrific force last night as fire attacked the plant of the Illinois Manufacturing Chemists, Inc., Hirsch Stein crossing, Calumet City. The heavy explosions were heard for miles. Two corrugated iron buildings and the office of the concern were destroyed, with a total loss estimated at $25,000. No one was hurt.

Calumet City firemen, assisted by equipment from Hammond, worked for nearly three hours before the blaze was brought under control. They were handicapped by the frequent blasts set off as flames reached the high explosive.

SPAIN CAPTURES 5 ITALIAN FLYERS; HELPED REBELS

Fascists Warn Towns Not to Harm Them.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GIBRALTAR, Feb. 2.—Five Italians and the planes they were flying for the Spanish Fascist insurgents have fallen into government hands, in southern Spain, it was learned today.

The government at Valencia said the planes were forced down Saturday and cited the incident as evidence of "new Italian interference in Spain."

Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, rebel commander in southern Spain, immediately replied by radio with a warning that any town that harmed the captured Italians would be destroyed.

Gen. De Llano asserted the Italians were members of the Spanish foreign legion and had no connection with the regular Italian army.

The Valencia government's report had asserted the Italians went to Spezia, Italy, Dec. 20, with thirty others, ostensibly to embark on the steamer Asiene for Ethiopia, but instead were taken to Seville and the Tablada airport there.

Word has been received here that a German captured at Eibar on the northern coast Spanish front has been condemned to death by a government tribunal. The German, named Von Einatten, claimed he is a nephew by marriage of Franz von Papen, Nazi ambassador to Austria.

Sun Shines; Fighting Renewed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Feb. 2.—After more than a week of rain, fog, and chilly weather the sun broke out today and both the government and rebels renewed their offensive on the Madrid front.

The rebels shelled Vallecas, suburb to the southeast, killing several persons, but were unable to menace the Madrid-Valencia highway. On the other hand, government troops, it was claimed, made an advance near Valdemoro, on the Aranjuez highway.

There was intermittent fire in University City, northwestern section of Madrid, and harder fighting near El Plantio, northwest of the capital. It was claimed new foreign shock brigades, including cavalry, were fighting for the rebels, but after artillery fire and an assault on government trenches were driven back. Government militiamen captured a tank.

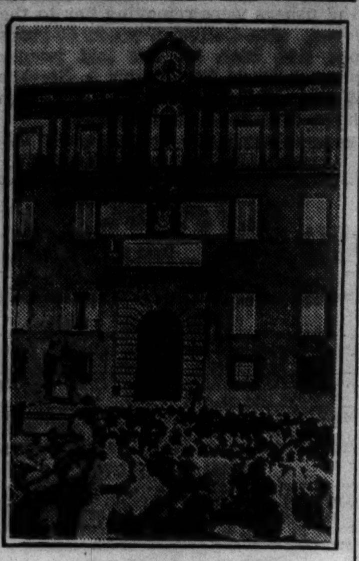
Approves Arms Ban.

VALENCIA, Spain, Feb. 2.—(AP)—The Spanish Popular Front government accepted today the principle of the European nonintervention committee's arms control plan for the Spanish civil war, but reserved the right to purchase munitions.

Premier Francisco Largo Caballero enunciated the government's stand at the second session of the cortes [parliament] held here since the government abandoned its capital at Madrid.

No power, Largo Caballero declared, has authority to interfere with shipments of war materials to the Popular Front government, "the only legitimate government in Spain." The Fascists, he maintained, should be deprived of munitions, which enable them to continue the civil war.

POPE LAYS PLANS FOR SUMMER VACATION; DISREGARDS ILLNESS



CASTEL GANDOLFO.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Pope Pius XI. made out a long-term program for himself today, indicating he was convinced that he could continue the duties of his church for some time despite his serious illness.

He tentatively set dates as far ahead as May and intimated he wanted to go to his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo at the end of that month. Last year he took his vacation there at the end of June. Members of the papal court said the pontiff had resolved to celebrate his 80th birthday, May 31, at Castel Gandolfo. He decided also to fix May 11 for the opening of the new Pontifical academy.

The pontiff was reported to be in fairly good condition today, although he did not rest well last night. He lacked sufficient strength to receive candles which customarily are given him on this Candlemas day.

NEW ATTORNEYS FOR "L" TRUSTEES UP TO U. S. COURT

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday took under advisement a motion of Col. A. A. Sprague and Britton I. Budd, temporary trustees of the Chicago Rapid Transit company, asking the appointment of Schuyler, Weinfeld & Hennessy as attorneys for the trustees. Appointment of the law firm was opposed by former Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson, who represents a group of security holders.

Ettelson declared the firm also represents the Commonwealth Edison company, a principal creditor in the proceedings. Judge Wilkerson last week approved a voluntary petition for reorganization of the company under section 77B of the bankruptcy laws.

Biting Dogs in Du Page County Bring Quarantine

State authorities have placed a dog quarantine in effect in Du Page county, it was announced yesterday by Dr. E. E. Byerrum of Warrenville, the county veterinarian. Several residents of Elmhurst and Downers Grove have been bitten recently. All dogs in the county must be kept locked up or on leash, Dr. Byerrum said. Du Page county dog owners charge that Chicagoans have been abandoning stray dogs in the county.

FRANCE PLUNGES INTO RACE TO GET READY FOR WAR

Doubles Defense Budget to Nearly Two Billions.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—(AP)—A vast program to strengthen France's armed forces over a four year period at a cost of 19 billion francs $874,000,000] was disclosed to the chamber of deputies today by Defense Minister Edouard Daladier.

EDOUARD DALADIER.

His speech outlining the plan was cheered wildly and at its conclusion the government was accorded a vote of confidence, 405 to 186, indorsing the national defense policy.

The program outlined today is in addition to the ordinary defense budget and the extraordinary armaments budget for 1937. These latter two budget allotments call for expenditure this year of a little more than 19,000,000,000 francs, or another $874,000,000.

Aimed at Germany.

Designed to match German military preparations, the plan includes these points:

Industrial mobilization in wartime.

Extension of the concrete and steel "Maginot line" along the Belgian and Swiss frontiers to stand as a barrier to invasion between Dunkerque, on the English channel, and the Jura mountains.

Construction of roads paralleling frontiers to facilitate swift movement of men and materials.

Increases in the size of mechanized army divisions; creation of a corps of 15,000 specialists to strengthen professional shock troops, and more stringent preparation of youths for military service to cope with Germany's youth training labor service.

Legislation to create a land, air, and naval generalissimo to be under control of a national defense ministry committee in time of conflict.

More intensive training for officers and noncommissioned officers.

War Chiefs Back Scheme.

The motion of confidence in the government's defense policy was signed by chairmen of the chamber army, navy, and air committees, who said their approval was designed to give the vote of confidence "additional significance to Hitler."

Daladier cautioned against overestimating the threat of an eastern invasion, declaring "the guns of our fortified lines and our air force could intervene to nail to the ground any attacking formations trying to advance under cover of armored cars."

Another high point in the chamber's day of drum rolling was a declaration by Air Minister Pierre Cot that France had increased the number of its first line fighting planes by 37 per cent since last June, material by 67 per cent, munition supplies by 50 per cent, and air armaments by 70 per cent.

MENTOR OF NAZIS ABROAD PUT IN FOREIGN OFFICE

Takes His Orders from Hitler and Neurath.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 2.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's iron clad cabinet which seemed settled for four more years of service after he had bestowed membership in the Nazi party on his non-Nazi ministers, underwent important changes today.

Baron Paul von Eltz Ruebenach, the most ardent Catholic in the cabinet, resigned as minister of posts and communications—officially because he is "of advanced age." He is 62 years old.

Ernest Wilhelm Bohle, leader of Germans living abroad, was made a director in the foreign office directly under the orders of Foreign Minister Baron Konsbantin von Neurath to "organize a uniform service to take care of Germans abroad."

Withdrawal Causes Shakeup.

The withdrawal of Banon von Eltz Ruebenach caused a slight shakeup within his ministry. He had just been made a member of the Nazi party by Hitler and had received the party's golden badge. It was rumored in political circles that the baron refused to accept the decoration in an effort to demonstrate to the fuehrer that certain Catholic groups object to the program calling for the elimination of the influence of the Catholic church in the education of German children. This was denied by officials.

Von Eltz Ruebenach was replaced by two men who have been holding important positions under him. Dr. Wilhelm Ohnesorge, his state secretary of the postal ministry, becomes minister of posts, while Julius Dortmueller, chief of the German railroads, which are state owned, becomes trafic minister.

Bohle, who is 34 years old and was born in England of German parents, has been chief of the Association of Germans Living Abroad since 1933. His influence in Hitler's inner conclave has been increasing steadily.

Outlines Bohle's Duties.

The Fuehrer issued a special decree in which he outlined the official duties of the new department in the foreign office. Bohle is under orders of the foreign minister as "chief of organization in foreign countries," and he also is under Hitler's personal orders as chief of the "Nazi party organization in foreign countries."

Bohle is the first full fledged Nazi to enter the hallowed precincts of the foreign office where patriotic nationalists have coöperated with Hitler because they believed he was helping the fatherland without becoming fervent Nazi, as the party had hoped.

It is understood that by the end of 1938 the Nazi party wants all diplomats weeded out of the service if they fail to join the Nazi party, or fail to meet the party's approval.

ANNUAL GERMAN ARMS EXPENDITURE SET AT FIVE BILLION DOLLARS

[Copyright: 1937: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Current German military expenditures exceed 5 billion dollars annually, according to the February issue of The Banker Monthly, a financial publication.

The actual military budget for 1936-'37, it said, will total 12 billion 600 million marks, compared with one billion 19 million marks in 1934-'35. At the end of that period, the publication continued, Germany will have spent upon arms in four years 31 billion 100 million marks.

The total budgetary expenditure of the reich for all purposes this year is set at 18 billion 800 million marks, involving a deficit estimated at 4 billion 318 million marks. In arriving at these figures, the magazine asserted, only official German sources of information have been used.

REPORTER FINDS TRUCK DRIVER'S LIFE BUMPY ONE

231 Mile Trip Discloses Hardships of Road.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Shortly before dawn today this reporter was in the cab of a six ton van rolling through the Holland tunnel under the Hudson river. We were in the trafic of New York City's gateway through which pass 40,000 trucks daily.

Shortly after sunset we arrived at the capital here, ending the first day of an assignment to report the truck viewpoint on such subjects as questions of highway safety, road design, trafic regulation, and motor taxation.

The main impression gained from eleven hours in the seat of a freighter is that the truck drivers are entitled to a bit of sympathy for the physical hardships of their occupation, if for no other reason. The jolts, vibrations, noise, and fumes in the cab are unknown to passenger car operators.

"You'll Get Used to It."

Vincent Glynn, a New Yorker, whose 245 pounds bounced and quivered behind the wheel, insisted that his machine, a 1935 model, is as comfortable as the average. He is a veteran and an expert at this business.

"The foist trip is tough," he remarked with an Al Smith accent, "but yous'll get used to it if your kidneys don't tear loose."

Nevertheless he also seemed a little groggy after 231 miles of wheeling; he scraped the top of his semi-trailer on entering a garage here and he, too, soaked in a hot shower to get kinks out of his back as soon as we reached a hotel.

Weariness Not Uncommon.

Eleven hours is not unusual for a truck driver. Nor is weariness uncommon among them. In the flats of New Jersey, on U. S. highway 1, this side of Newark, license plates and names on trucks identified some of them as engaged on eighteen hour round trips with twenty-eight hours at home between trips. Glynn, an informative as well as affable traveling companion, pointed them out.

Some of these long haulers had parked by the roadside for catnaps. Others were pushing on with faces strained against the drowsiness that overtakes night workers when the first sunlight strikes tired occular nerves.

The interstate commerce commission has recently been taking testimony to determine a basis for limiting the hours of truck drivers. As a witness for THE TRIBUNE on this and related subjects, our truck tour continues westward from here.

$2,105,693 TAXES LEAVE HITCHCOCK HEIRS $3,683,069

County Judge P. L. Persons of Lake county at Waukegan yesterday approved an appraisal of $3,683,069 made in the estate of Fremont B. Hitchcock, head of an investment security house, who died last June 19 at the age of 48. Mr. Hitchcock lived at 521 Waverly road, Highland Park.

This amount, determined by Frank Daly, of Waukegan, the appraiser, was left after deductions of $2,105,693 in federal and state inheritance taxes. Mr. Hitchcock's widow, Pauline, and their two children, Margaret and Fremont Jr., each receive approximately one-third of the estate, after bequests of $25,000 to the Highland Park hospital and $2,500 to a friend, Robert F. Trimm.

The taxes consist of $1,704,074 to the federal government, and a state tax of $401,619, taken from the estate after the federal tax has been deducted. Their total is an increase of $28,048 over an estimate made two months ago.

Joseph J. Worker, 76, Dies; Steel Plant Executive

Joseph J. Worker, an executive in several Illinois steel plants for many years, died last night in his home at 1645 East 67th street. He was 76 years old. Mr. Worker was superintendent of the Silvan Steel company in Moline until 1908, when he came to Chicago to help direct building of the Calumet Steel company plant. Later he served as general manager. In recent years he had been employed by the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company of Indiana Harbor. Surviving him are his wife, Georgia; a daughter, Elsie, and a son, Joseph G. Worker. Funeral services will be held on Thursday in Rock Island, Ill.

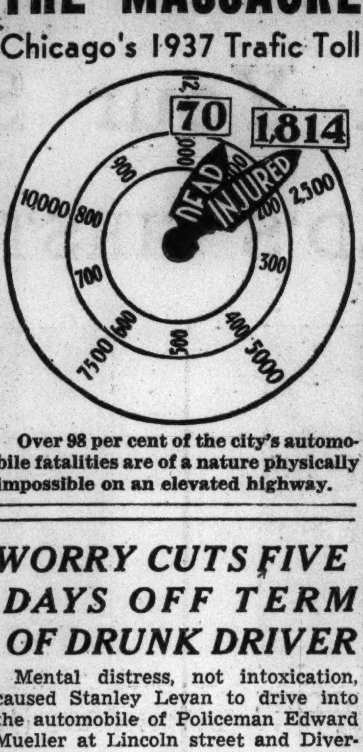
THE MASSACRE

Chicago's 1937 Trafic Toll



Over 98 per cent of the city's automobile fatalities are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway.

WORRY CUTS FIVE DAYS OFF TERM OF DRUNK DRIVER

Mental distress, not intoxication, caused Stanley Levan to drive into the automobile of Policeman Edward Mueller at Lincoln street and Diversey parkway. This was the plea made by Levan yesterday before Judge Charles S. Dougherty in Safety court. He is 31 years old and lives at 4822 Argyle street.

"I was at a party and I heard my wife was ill," he said. "I was rushing home when the accident occurred."

Judge Dougherty said the excuse was good enough to merit consideration and sentenced Levan to only five days in the county jail instead of the ten usually imposed for driving while intoxicated.

Four others sentenced in Safety court for trafic law violations are:

HENRY WITT, 46 years old, 1107 North California avenue, 10 days for reckless driving. He went through a stoplight at Flournoy street and Sacremento avenue on Jan. 3 and hit another automobile.

DREW A. EMERSON, 44 years old, 6035 Woodlawn avenue, 10 days for drunk driving. Policemen who stopped him at 61st street and Cottage Grove avenue for having no license plates found he was intoxicated.

LEO HOHL, 34 years old, 11353 Langley avenue, 10 days for leaving the scene after his automobile struck and killed Joseph Vileta, 52 years old, 7641 Dorchester avenue. The accident was held unavoidable, but the court punished Hohl for not stopping.

CLAUDE D. BRIDGES, 43 years old, 830 Wolfram street, 10 days for drunk driving. On Jan. 29 his automobile struck a parked car in front of 1143 Madison street.

A charge of speeding against Miss Harriet Ford, 21 years old, a student at Northwestern university, was continued to Feb. 15 by Judge John Gutkecht in Trafic court when Miss Ford agreed to have her sorority house mother in court on that date. Judge Gutknecht said that if the house mother consents he will order Miss Ford to visit automobile accident victims at the County hospital and the morgue. She admitted driving 55 miles an hour in Lake Shore drive near Deming place.

The Sensible Thing To Do When You Have A COLD:
Method takes several hours, but it works
To relieve the misery and discomfort of a cold, let your first effort be to clear the head, dry the secretions, reduce the fever and keep the bowels open. This will take time, and medicine of more than one kind.
You can get the necessary medicines, of your druggist, by asking for Pape's Cold Compound which combines them in a pleasant tablet.
To relieve the distress of a "new" cold, take two of these little tablets; chew them up, drink some water.
Some cases may require additional treatment. If so, follow directions on the package. The relief thus afforded and the comfort it brings you are well worth the time.
Nothing else that would be safe for you to take will bring relief more quickly than Pape's Cold Compound.

60,000 SAIL THIS MONTH TO BASK IN TROPICAL SUN

114 Cruises Leaving U.S.; Winter Sports Call.

BY FREDERIC BABCOCK.

The extent to which winter vacations have taken hold in America is shown by the 114 cruises, carrying 60,000 persons, that will leave this month for sunny spots in the south.

Of this number 42 cruises, carrying around 20,000 persons, will be bound for the West Indies. Ten years ago such tours were virtually unknown. Nowadays nearly every trans-Atlantic line places one or more of its ships in that service from December to April.

Destinations of Cruises.

Other destinations of February cruises are the Mediterranean, South America, Central America, Mexico, and California by way of the Panama canal. All these trips are heavily patronized.

Winter sports in the Alps and sun and sea bathing on the Riviera likewise are drawing cards for many Americans this season. Because of the recent devaluation of the Swiss franc, giving the dollar a 42 per cent greater purchasing power than it had before, St. Moritz and other Swiss resorts are playing hosts to the largest parties in years. Currency devaluation in France and Italy has brought about a similar result on the Riviera.

St. Moritz at Its Best.

The sports program at St. Moritz reaches its peak this month. The ski jumping contests at the Olympia leap there are to be held Feb. 6, the first bobsleigh Derby will follow two days later, and the world bobsleigh championship is to be settled in the runs beginning Feb. 10. International ice hockey titles are to be fought for in mid-February.

Among Chicagoans who will take in the winter sports at both St. Moritz and Chamonix are Mrs. Paul Ruane and Mrs. Edmund Brimhauer, who left last week on the Manhattan. Their fellow passengers included Mrs. W. B. Jahns, bound for Paris and Vienna; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob S. Sherman, Frederick Gottlieb, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Waddington, and T. S. Henderson.

Sail on the Bremen.

On the Bremen, leaving for Europe today, will be Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. North, Mrs. Beatrice Oxman, W. R. Ruehlmann, D. G. Roos, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Leith and two children, all of Chicago, and Miss Gertrude French of Rockford.

On the Exeter, sailing yesterday for ports on the Mediterranean, were Mrs. Howard S. Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Lew, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Gossett, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo F. Arnold, William L. Koehne, George M. Gibbs, and the Misses Genevieve C. Cleary, Mary Swissler, and Mary Alice Cochran.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. H. Thompson sailed for England Saturday on the American Shipper. Richard C. Martin, Paul Monnig, and William P. Christensen were on the Europa when it left the same day. Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Bonebrake and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Post Jr. of Chicago, Arthur S. Clift of La Porte, Ind., and Mrs. M. A. Castritius of Milwaukee took the Deutschland.

For Long Stay in England.

Planning long stays in England, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Stanley and their daughter, Barbara, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fenton embarked last week on the Aquitania. The Rev. Melvin E. Trotter and Dr. H. A. Ironside, both of the Moody Bible institute, sailed on the same ship to attend a series of meetings in England. Mme. Marguerite Pick and Capt. and Mrs. E. Sydney Feinstein were other passengers.

Setting out for Bermuda Saturday on the Monarch of Bermuda were Miss Marion Markham, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Urbanek, Mrs. George Metz, Mrs. Edward Benzo, and Mrs. Richard Mauer, all of this city, and Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Hoerner, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Hoerner, and Mr. and Mrs. John Corcoran, all of Evanston.

What can you tell me about the Antici Mattei palace in Rome?—F. S.

It is known chiefly for its library, which has a huge collection of books dealing with American history and numerous other subjects. The library also has 10,000 old and new prints and engravings, some of which are of great value, and paintings representing memorable events in American history. For this reason the palace is a favorite meeting place of tourists from the United States. It is regarded as one of the best specimens of 16th century architecture.

When are this year's fiestas to be held in the little towns of Amecameca and Chalma, Mexico, and how hard is it to get to them?—D. P.

The dates for the Amecameca fiesta are Feb. 15 to 22. The town is only an hour's auto drive from Mexico City. Chalma, which will celebrate from Feb. 12 to 19, is not so easily accessible. It is beyond Toluca, and is usually approached by burro. By way of penance, some of the participants in the Chalma fiesta have been known to dance throughout the entire eight days.

ILLEGAL LEVIES BLAMED FOR TAX COLLECTION DROP

56% of Levy Is Paid as Deadline Falls.

The poor showing in collection of 1935 taxes was attributed yesterday by tax experts to failure of Cook county officials to eliminate illegal levies. This has resulted in a huge mass of tax objections estimated to involve between 40 and 50 per cent of the total tax bill.

Deadline on payment of the second instalment of taxes under the 1935 levy fell Monday night, and when the figures were tabulated officials found that the gradual improvement in collections during the last three years had been reversed.

$80,000,000 Collected.

These figures showed that only about $80,000,000 of the $138,968,086 real estate levy had been collected, even including $2,000,000 last minute receipts that came to the treasurer's office by mail and from other sources. The total receipts are about 57 per cent of the total due, as compared with a percentage of 66 per cent paid on 1934 taxes at the time of the second instalment deadline.

Tax attorneys said yesterday that objections to 1935 taxes are greater than ever before, both in number and amount. One of these attorneys, Robert S. Cushman, asserted that the large amount withheld by objecting property owners is the chief reason for the decline in collections.

Large Payers Protest.

Experts estimated that substantially all those whose taxes amount to $10,000 or more are protesting part of their bills. As a step in the protest procedure, the objecting taxpayer withholds some of his second instalment. Objections range from 10 per cent to 25 per cent of the total.

Objections, according to attorneys, are based chiefly on excessive lost and cost allowances, appropriations for interest on tax warrants of prior years, and "padded" budgets. The largest objections to the 1935 bills are on board of education levies, one attorney said.

Fears for 1936 Levies.

John O. Rees, director of the committee on public expenditures, declared that unless some action is taken to provide for court validation of levies before bills are sent out there will be even greater objections to 1936 tax bills.

"We have been trying for two years to get legislation which will provide for preadjudication of tax levies," Rees said. "Public officials should have taken steps to have such a measure passed last year."

A bill providing for court confirmation of levies before bills are sent out will be submitted to the legislature at its next session, according to county officials.

TRAIN SERVICE IMPROVING INTO OHIO FLOOD AREA

Rerouting and Delays Still Necessary.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Passenger and freight service into and through the flooded areas along the Ohio river is improving, although considerable rerouting is necessary, according to officials of a number of railroads last night.

Both passenger and freight movements are being delayed, and in addition, some industries and companies in the flooded areas, particularly at Louisville, have been hit so hard by the flood that they are not in a position to accept delivery of merchandise.

De Luxe Train Halted.

The Pennsylvania railroad reported that it is getting all its trains into Louisville with the exception of the Florida Arrow, the Florida de luxe train. It is expected that service between Chicago and the Cincinnati Union station will be reëstablished either late today or tomorrow. When this is done it is possible that service to Florida will be restored. In the meantime the Pennsylvania is moving from 300 to 400 passengers a day from Chicago to Florida through Washington.

Freight via the Pennsylvania for the south is moving through Columbus, O., and Portsmouth, O., where it is picked up by the Norfolk and Western.

The New York Central is moving its Sunbeam for Florida from Chicago to Indianapolis, and Losantville, Ind., where it is transferred to the Chesapeake and Ohio of Indiana, thence to Ludlow, Ky., where it joins the Southern railway.

The Chicago and Eastern Illinois is issuing tickets for Florida by way of the Pennsylvania, but it expects its Dixieland, Dixie Limited, Dixie Mail and Dixie Flyer to go back into operation by the first or middle of next week.

Freight Permits Needed.

The Monon is getting in and out of Louisville with passenger trains and is handling passengers for points in the south through Louisville. It is taking merchandise into Louisville without delay, but authorizations are required from the Louisville mayor's committee on certain shipments because recipients are not in a position to take delivery.

The Illinois Central continues to turn its Florida passengers over to the Pennsylvania or New York Central or to the Frisco at St. Louis for movement via Memphis. No through trains are being operated between Chicago and New Orleans.

COUNCIL GROUP WINDS UP LIST OF PROPOSED NEW STREET NAMES

Final recommendations by the council sub-committee on street nomenclature, to eliminate duplications, similar sounding names and variation in broken link streets, were completed yesterday. Because all of the changes have been approved by aldermen of the wards affected, Ald. Thomas J. Terrell [29th] said he expected speedy approval by the council.

One of the oldest names to disappear will be the remnant of River street, once the busiest thoroughfare of the city, when it connected South Water market with the old Rush of River street on the lower level along the south bank of the river east of the Michigan avenue bridge will be known as East Wacker drive.

North and South Lincoln street was recommended changed to North and South Wolcott avenue. Another change was the designation of Irving Park boulevard as Irving Park road. An alley on the near north side between Walton street and Delaware place, Ernst court, and Michigan avenue was given the name of Hugulet street.

WORK OR STARVE! U. S. PIONEERS IN ALASKA ARE TOLD

New Deal Cuts Off Credit from Colony.

PALMER, Alaska, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Matanuska colonists received notice today from the Alaska Rehabilitation corporation that they are going on a cash basis in eight days—and the new system is founded on the "no work, no eat" principle.

Ross L. Sheely, manager of the corporation, in letters advised all colonists that a work-credit scheme will replace the present arrangement under which subsistence is provided on credit.

He set Feb. 10 as the last day on which tokens, given now in lieu of cash, could be traded in at the colony commissary.

Sets Rates of Pay.

The notice said no credit would be allowed on any future purchases from the corporation except on building materials, farm machinery, live stock, and stock feed.

Sheely explained the new system was started to encourage the colonists to clear land and erect buildings, work for which they would be paid at the following rates:

For clearing brush, up to $15 an acre, depending on density; cutting trees and removing logs, up to $20 an acre; constructing each present type of barn, $400; constructing each present type of poultry house, $50; stumping, fencing, painting, and similar work at amounts based on estimated length of time required.

Some Already on Cash Basis.

Sheely said the entire schedule of the work-credit system would be "subject to alteration or revision if it were shown to be unfair in any respect."

When the colonists, most of them middle western farmers, came north in the spring of 1935 they were allowed virtually unlimited credit while their farms were being developed. A few of them went on a cash basis as a result of their own efforts last summer. Others became hopelessly in debt.

The corporation recently started action to reclaim the equipment of Charles Ruddell, who, Sheely said, owed the corporation $14,000.

PILGRIMS PRAY; AWAIT OPENING OF CATHOLIC CEREMONY IN MANILA

MANILA, Feb. 3 [Wednesday].—(AP)—Thousands prayed throughout Manila early this morning, preparing to participate in solemn ceremonies opening the 33d international Eucharistic congress.

Crowds of visiting Catholics and great numbers of Filipinos thronged midnight masses and awaited the dawn and exposure of the Host. It is to remain in view on altars of adoration until the congress closes on the night of Feb. 7.

Officially, the Eucharistic congress opens this afternoon, with Cardinal Denis Dougherty of Philadelphia, the papal legate, delivering the salutation.

The cardinal, after a tumultuous reception on his arrival Monday, was hailed with joy yesterday as he visited Philippine towns by automobile on the way to Antipola. There 10,000 persons cheered him and his entourage, which included an archbishop and ten bishops.

Returning to Manila, Cardinal Dougherty visited the palace of Archbishop Michael O'Doherty of Manila, where he presented to the Filipinos a gold ciborium, a gift from Pope Pius. The cardinal said the present was enhanced because it came from the hands of the holy father as he lay in his sick bed.

"We are thankful," he said, "that the holy father has lived so long, to be with us in spirit on this occasion."

Suit Offerings the Snappiest of Many Years

First Spring Arrivals Cause Sensation.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Take your choice this spring from the snappiest collections of suits and suit dresses that have been designed in a long time. The first arrivals are spell binding things that make the most conservative soul hustle into some kind of suit without delay.

The two piece ideas stress a simple fitted jacket which buttons right up under the chin; most of them are collarless and all have long sleeves that give the entire ensemble the suit flavor. Dark and light combines, such as beige jacket with black skirt, gray with navy, and light blue with dark brown skirt are refreshing combines after weeks of all-in-ones of dark tones.

Cape suits, or trios, feature a dark skirt, a light jacket, and a dolman cut cape the same color as the jacket. Bolero jackets, quite the most dashing tops of the collections, come with long sleeves, and end just above the waistline. Some are braided, some plain, but all are smart, neat, and new. Free swinging coats to slim dresses are much shorter than last year's jackets, with much of the back fullness gone. Even the sleeves are less bunched or puffed into the shoulder seams.

The dress and jacket idea is going stronger than ever, and what the versatile clothes collector can manage in the way of varied and different get-togethers with such a foundation outfit is a matter of fashion history.

Coat dresses are back with emphasis on coatlike fabrics. They're made very simply, most of them with long sleeves and the inevitable row of buttons down the front. They are ideal for wear with fur capes, fur pieces and with short high colored coats of warm wool.

Suits this spring are so different and so varied as to combined color, fabric, and style that practically every one can find the very suit she needs the first trip to town.

Flared cuffs are outlined with shirrings that reach from wrist to top. These gloves are from the newly unpacked spring showings. Soft kidskin is used in all pastel colors and white for evening and in all the newest high colors for afternoon and street wear. Short Cuts in Cooking Aid Business Girl

Time Saving Tricks Help Her Prepare Meal.

BY MARY MEADE.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The girl who leaves business to take up a career of homemaking should be a thoughtful wife, for she knows from experience the let-down feeling of coming home tired at the end of a busy day to find nothing to eat in the house, no one coming from a fragrant, steaming kitchen to greet her, no food and, perhaps, no welcome.

Every city of any size nowadays is filled with single working women, women who must go home at the end of a busy day to prepare their own meals.

They want short cuts. And for them, and for other busy women, the commercial world is furnishing short cuts of every type. Biscuit mixes, gingerbread, pie, and cake mixes, prepared gravies, concentrated meat extract for soups, consommes and gravies; also canned meats, vegetables, fruits. With a shelf stocked with these products, a quick meal at the end of a long day is possible and pleasurable.

This menu for a supper, which may be prepared in less than an hour, is a meal which furnishes a balanced diet and which should be completely satisfying, too.

Liver and Bacon
Baking Powder Biscuits
[prepared mix]
Honey
Mashed Potatoes, Brown Gravy
[made with meat extract]
Combination Raw Vegetable Salad
Lemon Pie [pie mix]
Hot Chocolate [prepared mix]

It is possible to make the most delicious of brown gravies simply by adding two tablespoons of the meat extract suggested to an ordinary white sauce. And a lemon pie which couldn't be distinguished from the kind mother used to make is possible with the particular pie mix I have in mind. Names of the extract and the pie mix, both of which have been tested in my kitchen, will be furnished on request.

The combination raw vegetable salad may be made from any vegetables convenient to use. A suggested combination is one of shredded lettuce, watercress, tomatoes, carrot, and green pepper, with a dressing such as the following.

Dressing for Green Vegetable Salad.

⅔ cup olive oil or salad oil
⅓ cup tarragon vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
Sprinkling cayenne pepper
½ cup chili sauce

Shake or beat these ingredients together thoroughly before adding to the salad.

Sermon subject—"What Have We Learned from the Depression?"

Anthem—"Search Me, O God!"

THIS comes straight from a woman who got it from the sister of the first husband of Mrs. Simpson, who got it from her brother, Commander Earl Winfield Spencer, who is laid up in San Diego with a broken leg. Commander Spencer is still getting quantities of feminine fan mail—love letters and proposals from women who are attracted by his being the first husband of the former British king's love. One of them wrote to the naval air commander to inquire if he could give her Mrs. Simpson's recipe for chocolate cake.

MUSIC at International house. Row after row of rapt faces, absorbed in Beethoven as presented by the Pro Arte String quartet—the quartet of the court of Belgium—at International house. . . . Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, lavish patron of music, who presented the complete cycle to students, faculty, and friends of the University of Chicago, in the front row with Carl Bricken, conductor of the University of Chicago Symphony orchestra, listening intently. . . . One wonders if she listens every night, and if perhaps, when the quartet is on tour, they all get together in a train drawing room for a little music. . . . Silver haired Mrs. William H. Monroe, accompanied by her tall son. . . . Janet Fairbank with a party of friends, who dined at International house before the concert. . . . Howard Talley, assistant conductor of the University of Chicago Symphony orchestra, with his violinist bride. . . . Dr. and Mrs. Phillip Miller. . . . Concert Pianist Rudolph Reuter. . . . The dean of the humanities at the University of Chicago, Richard P. McKeon. . . . Sabatini, the big, foreign looking violin teacher. . . . Music Lover Arthur Meeker Jr., whose new book, "Sacrifice to the Graces," has a prima donna for a heroine. . . . Clarke Kessler, who plays piano and concert bassoon with the Chicago Symphony orchestra and viola with Carl Bricken's orchestra. . . . Philip Manuel, modern master of the clavichord. . . . Dozens more who have been coming every night of the series they could get tickets, which are not purchasable, but given away. . . . Crowds of music students waiting in the foyer hoping for leftover seats.

A SWARTHY fellow in a lether jacket inquired of some folk going toward International house what was going on there.

"The Pro Arte quartet, playing the Beethoven cycle," one of them answered.

"Gosh," replied the fellow, looking plainly horrified and beating it across the street away from the scene as quickly as possible.

CARL BRICKEN'S young son Alexander — "Sandy" for everyday use—may not grow up to be a music lover, but no one can say his father didn't start him out in that direction. His nursery, the walls of which were adorned by Mr. Bricken, who paints as an avocation, have, beside some nursery pictorial themes, such as Mickey Mouse and the rabbit from "Alice in Wonderland," some significant bars of music. On one wall, with an oversize staf and great black notes climbing decoratively up and down the scale are three lines of music. One is from "Hansel and Gretel," another from "Schwanda," the opera presented last year by Mr. Bricken's orchestra, and the third from the Beethoven Ninth.

Graphologist Tells Common Human Failing

Prone to Judge Others by Ourselves.

Your Handwriting Analyzed

Any Tribune reader can obtain a personal graphology chart showing his or her assets, handicaps, talents, and emotions by following these rules:

1. Send sample of handwriting to Muriel Stafford, Chicago Tribune, postoffice box 1720.

2. Inclose 10 cents [carefully wrapped] for each sample of handwriting you wish analyzed.

3. Inclose a self-addressed, STAMPED envelope, folded once.

BY MURIEL STAFFORD.

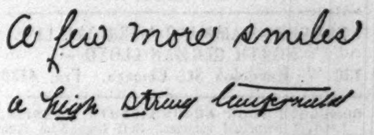
[Copyright, 1937, By Muriel Stacord.]

Do you really see the persons with whom you live or do you see them as reflections of yourself interpreting everything they say to mean what you would mean?

Occasionally a forceful demonstration of how unfairly we judge each other comes to me in my daily mail. Often the writer of an extremely emotional handwriting is accusing the writer of a rather phlegmatic, peace loving nature of being a vicious and ruthless character. Sometimes it is amusing. Sometimes sad.

Once it was the husband of a woman who had one of the loveliest handwritings imaginable. I marked about all the virtues on my chart, but her husband wrote to tell me I was wrong. She was a terrible woman or else how could I explain her leaving a good home and a small son? One glance at his handwriting was enough. He had obviously driven her away!

Of all the "fire eating" ruthless handwritings imaginable, his was one of the most emotionally unbalanced I had ever seen. No sweet, gentle, kindly, peace loving woman ever could live with him for long. I wrote and told him that all the fine qualities I had marked on his wife's chart were correct.



A few more smiles
a high strung temperamental

A couple of days ago I received a handwriting of the same type as that of the wife I have just mentioned. Underneath was scrawled a postscript by some one else. It says:

"This person is high strung, temperamental; is making herself unhappy and makes all unhappy who come in her way. She sits and wants people to entertain her, but they hate her because she is so quarrelsome, finding fault with everything and every one. Dirt and untidiness worry her. She is jealous of her husband and every woman who speaks to him, and she turns against them on account of that. She has almost lost her mind."

There is no selfishness, no jealousy, no quarrelsomeness at all to be found in the first handwriting, but all these qualities are outstanding in that of the person who sneaked in the little postscript shown beneath the first. She is the one whose handwriting shows evidence of disordered emotions, not the person of whom she is talking. The only true thing she has said is that dirt and untidiness worry the first writer.

A knowledge of graphology certainly helps us to discount unfair accusations. There's a story in this double note. If I only knew who wrote the postscript!

Army Relief Society Plans Benefit Ball

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

The Sixth Corps area branch of the Army Relief society will give a military ball at the Army and Navy club on Saturday, Feb. 27. There will be cards for those who do not dance and a program of entertainment in which stage and radio talent will take part. Mrs. Charles D. Herron, whose husband, Gen. Herron, is commander of the Sixth Corps area, is chairman of the committee planning the affair.

Among those working with her are Mrs. Paul W. Newgarden, Mrs. George P. Hays, Mrs. Charles A. Thuis, Mrs. Frank Parker, Mrs. William Scott Wood, Mrs. Lloyd R. Wolfe, and Mrs. Stephen Roby.

Mrs. Arthur A. Small, Mrs. Robert G. Peck, Mrs. William H. Hubbard, and Mrs. Ernest S. Ballard are some of those interested in the Chicago civilian branch of the society, so they, too, are taking an interest in the ball arrangements.

This will be the first ball of the sort the Sixth corps area has given in five years. The Army Relief society takes care of the widows and orphans of officers and enlisted men of the regular army and practically every cent taken in by the society goes for relief, for there are no paid employés and the only expenses are postage and the printing of the annual report. The society was founded in 1900 at the home of the Joseph Duryees in New York. Mrs. Ballard is their daughter and she now is president of the Chicago civilian branch.

Tickets to the ball are $1.25 each and may be obtained from Mrs. Newgarden, secretary of the Sixth corps area branch, room 1006 in the new United States postoffice building.

The Stage

"On Your Toes," a musical comedy with Ray Bolger as star, has just concluded a run of forty weeks in New York and may come to Chicago soon as a successor to the "Ziegfeld Follies." It was originally booked for the Grand Opera house to open Feb. 15.

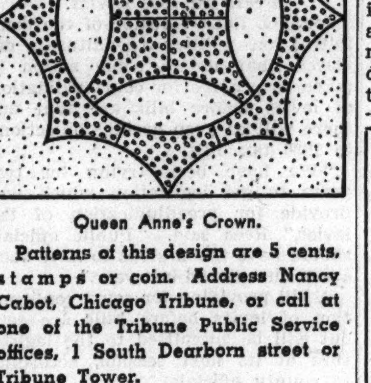
The Chicago company of "You Can't Take It with You," which will come to the Harris theater next Sunday night, will open its career with a three days' stay in Indianapolis, starting tomorrow.

The next WPA production at the Blackstone theater will be "The Good Old Summertime," a comedy by Martin Flavin, opening Feb. 17. The play now at the Blackstone, "Within These Walls," will then be moved to the Princess theater.

Charlotte Greenwood will give the one-hundredth Chicago performance of "Leaning on Letty" in the Selwyn theater this afternoon. Souvenir photographs of the star will be distributed.

Jacob Beni-Ami will give performances in Yiddish of "Yegor Bulitchev," a drama by Maxim Gorky, in the theater of the Jewish People's Institute next Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

Quilt Inherits Its Name and Charm from Queen Anne



Queen Anne's Crown.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

BY NANCY CABOT.

"Crown" quilt patterns have been named for people as ancient as Julius Cæsar. "Queen Anne's Crown," illustrated today, and another block, "Victoria's Crown," are well known patterns, but hardly worthy of the antique rating of a design such as "Cæsar's Crown." Despite the comparative youth of the pattern, which first was made in 1878, it has all the grace and charm of the woman for whom it was named.

Believe It or Not, Family Radio Is Aid in Reducing

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

An 18-day dance diet has infinitely more sense as a reducing measure than its forerunner, the 18-day diet. Arthur Murray, nationally known dance instructor, is responsible for the 18-day dance diet phrase. He tops his argument for the sanity of his diet with the fact that tap dancers such as Eleanor Powell, Ginger Rogers, Mitzi Mayfair, and so on, lose anywhere from three to five pounds at a single performance.

For the average woman dancing lessons at a good salon come too high for more than an hour or two a week, if that much. But——

There always is the radio in the home. There's floor space, and if one is trying to get off weight, one rather would do it without an audience looking on, isn't it true? After the children are off to school and Dad's nose is buried in the business of the day, any woman could give ten to fifteen minutes to pirouetting around to dance music. In fact, a lot of the tunes you hear are better for stepping than for any other reason, it seems to us. If you could take just enough tap lessons to get the hang of a few steps, you could have quite a workout mornings, under the most pleasant circumstances. Any youngster in the neighborhood would be willing to show you how to make the feet tap, if your own home doesn't boast a tapper.

Not only in the interest of reducing do we urge the home stepping to music. It is to offset that settledness of figure that figures have a way of adopting once we get out of the dance-loving years. It is to offset the heavy step of middle and old age that we urge the music you be turned on regularly for dance practice. What actually happens is that when you get youth back in the step with dancing and you get moving around with the music lightly you begin to sit up and take notice of yourself more clearly. You're in more of a mood of pride to pass up the trip to the kitchen for that in-between cup of coffee with cream and sugar and left over fruit cake slice. Aren't we right?

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Did you ever know such a winter for having hair and skin go completely haywire? One woman told us the other day that her face felt as though it were going to crack into pieces, with the pieces making a loud noise as they hit the floor. We could sympathize ourselves.

And there seems to be a lot of hair standing on end around this town; hair that's completely sapped of oil and showing it in every stubborn strand. This condition, which even a gal's own mother couldn't find attractive, is probably due to flu as much as to anything else. A bout of sickness like that inevitably leaves hair pretty badly off when it comes to satin sheen and tractability.

If yours is in such a state you might lend an ear while we tell you about a corrective oil that does wonders. It's just the dish for the woman who can't afford professional treatments. And one tablespoon does the trick. You'll like what it does when you use it just once. We've recently seen it transform a dry, woolly mop into a crowning glory that a movie star would envy.

It's a heavy oil, of course, and a rich one, but it doesn't have a disagreeable odor. The best way to use it is to give yourself the benefit of a good brushing and scalp massage first; then to heat a tablespoonful of the oil and saturate both hair and scalp freely. Use a bit of cotton and separate the hair into dozens and dozens of parts so that every inch of the scalp and every strand of hair gets a good dousing. Do this the night before you shampoo if you can. If that's out, apply it an hour or so before the big scrub-up.

Apply the oil, warm, of course, and then cover your hair with towels wrung out in very hot water to steam it in.

You'll find it makes a big difference. Your hair will be glossier, less dry and lots easier to handle. It will also be healthier than it was before. Hair crying for oil is hair that's actually sick.

Vacations Call Chicagoans to Many Resorts

Warmth, Sunshine Goal of Most Travelers.

BY JUDITH CASS.

SOME like it hot, some like it cold, but every one likes a winter vacation, apparently, for practically every one we meet is busy getting ready to leave. Most of the travelers are seeking sunshine and warmth, but some are seeking sunshine and cold. Among the former are the John T. McCutcheons, who are leaving on Lincoln's birthday for their retreat in the Bahamas, Treasure Island. The island now is occupied by the Cyrus McCormicks, who arrived there on Jan. 25 for a three weeks' stay.

Some time fairly soon after their arrival on Treasure Island the McCutcheons will have as guests Lady Burney and Miss Dewar of London, for the two ladies are planning to go to Palm Beach the middle of this month and will visit the McCutcheons soon after that.

Palm Beach and Miami are filled with foreign visitors this winter for the obvious reason that conditions in southern Europe make it difficult for Europeans to visit the winter resorts they are accustomed to frequent. Lady Burney planned her visit to the McCutcheons when she was in Chicago last fall as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Henry High.

The Highs will see their daughter again when she is in Palm Beach, for they are spending the winter at the Breakers there. Their other daughter, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr., and Mr. Bowen are spending the winter, as usual, on their ranch at Castle Hot Springs, Ariz.

The McCutcheons are taking their youngest son, Barr, 9, with them, and their other sons, Shaw, who is in his first year at Milton academy, and Jack, who is a sophomore at Harvard, will join their parents for their spring vacations. Mrs. McCutcheon's youngest sister, Mrs. John L. King, and Mr. King will visit Treasure Island this winter, probably early in March, but the former Sylvia Shaw and her husband, Clay Judson, do not expect to go south this season. They plan to go east, however, to spend the week-end before Washington's birthday with their daughter, Alice, who is at Hathaway house, Milton academy, this year.

Barrett Scudders Plan Trip to Sun Valley.

Skiing and skating instead of swimming and golf are in store for the Barrett Scudders, who are leaving tomorrow for a fortnight at the new Sun Valley lodge at Ketchum, Ida.

The junior Charles S. Deweys have given up plans for a trip to Guatemala, and Mrs. Dewey is going to Phoenix next week with her grandmother, Mrs. William O. Goodman. Mrs. Dewey will be away a fortnight, but Mrs. Goodman will remain west a few weeks longer.

Miss Marian Newcomet and her brother and sister-in-law, the Wallborn Newcomets of Sheboygan, Wis., have gone to the Hillsboro club in Pompano, Fla., for February. Mr. and Mrs. Horace E. Newcomet, their parents, planned to go south with them, but Mr. Newcomet's business interests have taken him to the flood districts and their southern vacation has been postponed.

Mrs. Ralph N. Isham has gone to Pasadena, Cal., to spend two or three weeks with her father, Thomas C. Dennehy.

W. Edwin Stanleys in Europe Until Spring.

The W. Edwin Stanleys and their daughter, Miss Barbara Stanley, have gone abroad and will be in England, Switzerland, and Paris until spring.

The junior Mrs. W. Edwin Stanley has spent the last month at the Passavant hospital undergoing treatment for a neck fracture incurred when she was thrown from a horse two years ago. She expects to be at the hospital at least another fortnight. Her parents, the Benjamin L. Behrs, have gone to Aiken for several weeks.

The Angus Hibbards have left for Rancho Linda Vista, near Tucson, Ariz., where they will remain until April 1.

The Orville Taylors sailed Sunday from New York for a three weeks' cruise to the West Indies.

The Jacob Bischofs sailed last Saturday for a three weeks' cruise to the West Indies and South America.

Studio Cafes Strive to Keep Patrons Happy

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 2.—[Special.] —It not only is the duty of the waitresses in the studio café at Twentieth Century-Fox to see that their actor customers get their food served properly, but also to see that they are fed within a time limit and that they are happy and harmonious when they go back to their sets.

The other day one noticed that Gregory Ratoff wore a mustache when he came into Café Metropole, but that when he left the tip and got up to go his upper lip was bare. The mustache wasn't anywhere around the table, on the floors, or chairs. Then began a major hunt. Stacks of trays and dishes were explored by the help until the mustache finally was discovered, soggy and filled with cigaret ashes at the bottom of a cup of coffee. The mustache could not be used any more, but at least the waitress had done her part.

Helen Jepson's screen debut is to be in "Goldwyn Follies," but she will play herself—an opera star.

Lillian Rich, featured in silent films, is doing a subordinate rôle in "Espionage," with Edmund Lowe and Madge Evans.

Robert Taylor has signed a new one year lease on his modest five room bungalow.

Frank Morgan has opened a furniture store in Palm Springs.

A smart parent is Roscoe Karnes. He made cash bets with Roscoe Jr. and Mary Jane, his two children, that they wouldn't finish January without catching the flu. Both youngsters took every precaution and neither caught the flu which, Karnes figured, saved doctor bills.

Terry Ray, who accomplished the dream of many department store girls and got herself a featured start in motion pictures, has just had her "probationary" contract renewed at more salary at Paramount. Her new assignment is in "Murder Goes to College."

Coming from Chicago where she had clerked in one department store and had been in the auditing department of another, she failed in her first attempt to crash the movies, but got a job in a candy store here. She is 22 and at one time was "Miss Englewood" in a Chicago beauty contest.

Stone Age Discovery Gives Higher Rating to That Civilization

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 2.—(AP)—An acropolis, first example of stone age architecture marking the earliest urban civilization in the prehistoric world yet unearthed, has been found in Mesopotamia, Prof. Millar Burrows of Yale announced today.

The discovery, brought to light in excavations at Tepe Gawra indicates a heretofore unsuspected highly civilized life during the stone age.

The acropolis upsets the original notion that pottery was the highest expression of the development of man at this stage, estimated to be about the fifth millennium B. C.

It consists of three buildings, the northern temple, the eastern shrine, and the central temple. All of these open upon a main court closed by secular houses.

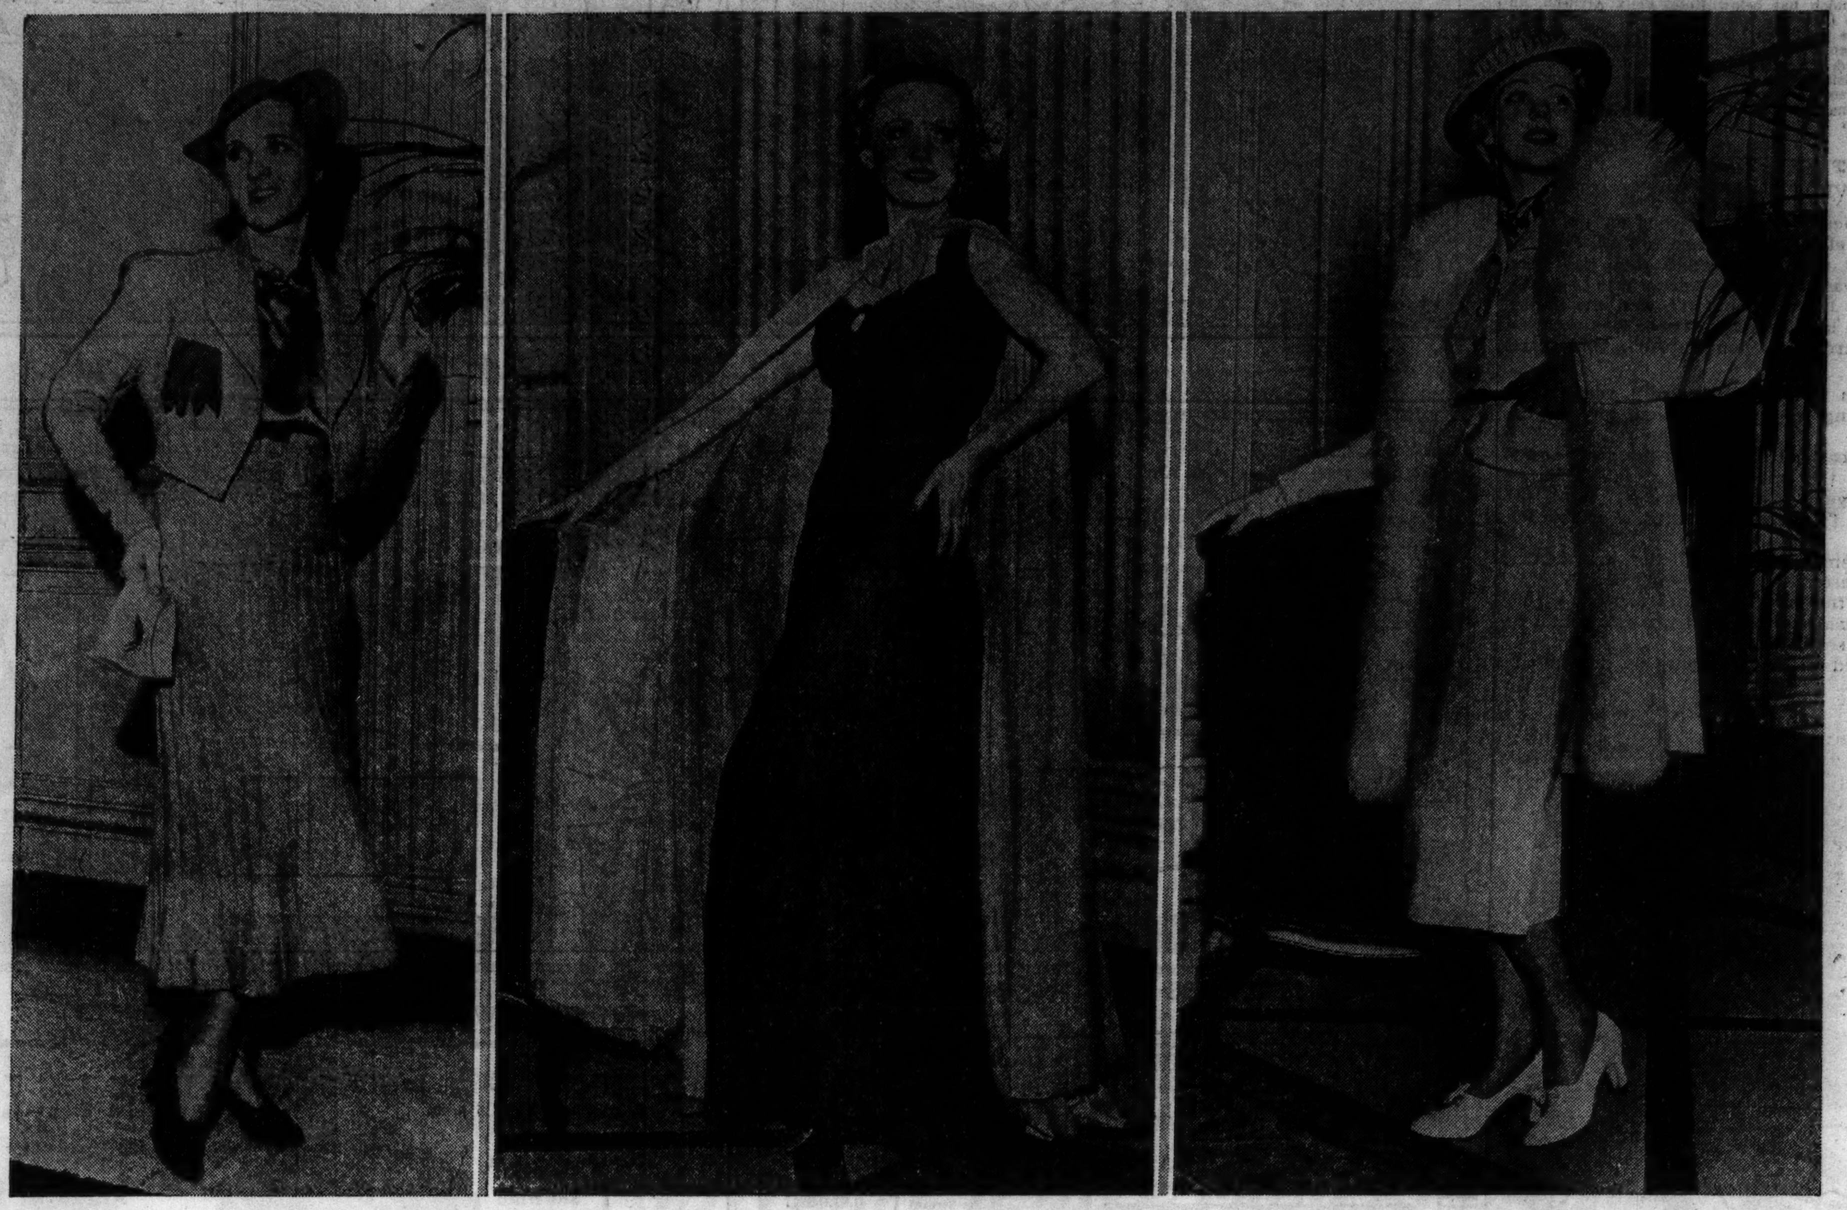
Suits, Jackets and Capes Please Style Experts at Fashion Show



What the designers of Chicago hope you will want for your spring wardrobe went on display at the show of the Style Creators of Chicago last night. At the left is a gray wool street suit with gray satin blouse and dubonnet accessories. In the center is dubonnet again, this time in the chiffon of the evening gown. The flame pink chiffon cape is trimmed with a darker shade of pink. And if you like white fox for afternoon, there is the three piece suit in one of the new cereal shades with a print ascot and then—red again—this time in the hat trimmed with white.

City's Fashion Creators Win Buyers' Cheers

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Chicago manufacturers and designers last night paraded their wares on blondes and brunettes before several hundred buyers and style experts from over the country in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel. And the buyers approved. Their approval was audible, being signified by applause, whistling and long-drawn "whews," especially from masculine buyers. The fashion show was sponsored by the Style Creators of Chicago, and was the association's annual opening spring show.

A table full of masculine newspaper fashion experts sat with forks poised aimlessly over coldish chicken, apparently lost in wonder over either the models or the fashions. Although men buyers obviously had their favorites among models, their ardor in handclapping increased when they beheld prints, bolero dresses, and redingote or cape ensembles, some of the spring "musts" in fashion.

One of the high points of the evening was when a State street store showed its fabrics by a novel method. A man dressmaker, bending over a model in a slip, draped her in chartreuse tweed, taking pins from his mouth, applying them and producing a suit creation. Another model he draped in a large print in another minute and a half, stuck a flower in her waist, and she walked down the runway ready for a dance in an evening gown.

A blonde model with a meaningful look and sinuous walk wore black sheer with tiny tucks, its short jacket ending in ruching, as did the skirt. White lingerie touches at throat and sleeves were revealed when she took off her jacket. Nearly every dress had a jacket, and most of the ensembles had hats which contrasted with clever intention.

A splashy print dress of red and purple and green and a few other colors was worn by a slim brunette who increased its dramatic effect. Over the dress she wore a tight-fitted white linen jacket, and a small red hat.

"The new muffin hat," a buyer explained. "It is exceeded in importance only by the new bumper brim."

With the splashy brunette was a demure creature who wore a black sheer, with white embroidery touches, and a bunch of flowers at the throat. An all white ensemble except for embroidery on the panels of a coat showed the peasant influence provoked by Mrs. Wallis Simpson's Dalmatian trip. Its skirt was very full and very short, with scalloped hem, and a bolero jacket, also scalloped.

So much red and so many shades of red were shown that even fashion experts became confused as to what kinds of red they were. Identical costumes with short full jackets were worn by two girls. The jackets were, it was explained, "two-tone wine" in colors. A gray hat was ornamented for a gray ensemble with fuchsia and red ribbons.

Dresses called by the ominous name "double duty dresses" appeared frivolous enough to cheer up any office. They are to be worn by girls for office duty, after which, a press agent said, all girls went to cocktail lounges these days. "Then they remove the jackets and have that 'above table glamor'," he said.

They were black sheers, modeled by two blondes and a brunette. The latter, with a dramatic flourish and inquiring gaze, removed her jacket and showed a great deal of back, another a crisp white frilly collar and tiny sleeves.

Rivaling the luxurious models in silver fox capes and white fox evening coats over "parvenche blue" dresses three girls in "evening suits" drew whistles and cheers. They were white broadcloth suits with tightly fitting, long skirts, split halfway to the knee. When the jackets, which were lined with brightly colored prints, were removed tops or blouse effects of the same prints were seen.

Most feminine of all the styles, however, was a black chiffon over white with a full skirt, a square neck, and full, quaint sleeves. Neck and sleeves were outlined in dainty white embroidery. Borrowed from the vogue for the unfeminine heroine of "Gone with the Wind," best seller novel of the "deep south," were the fluffy pink and blue evening dresses with billowing skirts, held out by hoops and ornamented with bunches of flowers. The old-fashioned very blonde models who wore them looked out shyly from under huge droopy hats.

Heart Association to Hold Annual Sale at Six Hospitals

A sale of Valentine stamps, the proceeds to be used for combating heart disease, will be held next Saturday at six hospitals under the auspices of the Chicago Heart asociation. Girl Scouts will conduct an all day sale in the lobbies of Passavant, St. Luke's, Mount Sinai, and the Women's and Children's hospitals. In the afternoon there will be a similar sale in the Presbyterian and Grant hospitals.

Mrs. Gertrude Howe, executive director of the association, said the annual stamp sale was the association's principal means of support.

"Heart disease is increasing in Chicago," she said. "It caused more deaths last year than ever before."

Ignaz Friedman a Music Treat in Any Season

Great Pole Is Piano Artist in Every Phase.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Ignaz Friedman provided a climax last night in the Adult Education council's Musical Arts series. Playing a recital in Orchestra hall before a huge audience the veteran Polish pianist displayed a kind of artistry which comes our way only a very few times in even the best of seasons.

It is not so much a "kind of artistry" either. It is well-rounded and inclusive, with a good measure of all the qualities which go to make a great pianist.

In the course of four major works [Bach, Chopin, Brahms, Liszt] Mr. Friedman found opportunities to prove, in his quiet and unassuming way, that he has not allowed any one excellence to overshadow the others. Thus, he is technically adept without ever letting his dexterity give an impression of hardness or coldness. His tone is rich and varied but so well controled that the colorings do not blur the lines of his music.

That was a beguiling rubato in the slow movement of the Chopin B Minor sonata. Yet, true to form, the pianist took care that the beauty of the moment actually at hand should never tempt him or his listeners over the invisible line which divides expressiveness from sentimentality.

Mr. Friedman phrases with such eloquence that even outdated music like the Liszt "Venezia and Napoli" takes on new vitality and interest. In the case of a superlatively great work, such as the Brahms-Handel Variations, this quiet, assured eloquence helped to produce one of the finest bits of interpretation the town has experienced this year.

But you have to come back to color to do this pianist justice. He has a bewildering number of shades on his palette and displays them generously. The extreme delicacy of the Chopin Etude in Thirds [has it ever been played here more rapidly and lightly?] and the richness of most of the Bach Chaconne were good examples of the range of the man's resources.

The De Paul university symphony orchestra, Wesley La Violette directing, will play a concert in the Goodman theater tonight. Soloists are Freddi Lee White, soprano, and Bertha Ostrar, pianist.

SYNOPSIS.

Adrian Somervell and Diana Lake become engaged when the young scientist learns he is heir to the fortune of his late stepmother, Rose Somervell, ex-star of the theater, who was Diana's godmother. Until shortly before her death Adrian and she had been estranged. Adrian had lunched with her shortly before her death. Also there were Nicholas Blundell, wealthy bachelor solicitor, who lived in the London flat below Rose, Felix Arenson, an old friend, and Blundell's neurotic secretary, Elsie Dilworth. Elsie was madly in love with Adrian, who'd repulsed her. Blundell is Diana's godfather. She'd always disliked him. An autopsy reveals that Rose was poisoned. Then Diana's mother is murdered. Robbery is thought to be the motive. Adrian is arrested, suspected of Rose's murder. Blundell persuades Diana to move to Rose's flat. Elsie Dilworth, who has left Blundell's employ, returns to search the premises. Diana sees and trails her when she leaves, but loses track of her when she takes a taxi. Diana goes with Blundell to visit Adrian in prison.

INSTALMENT XXI.
A PRISON VISIT.

They were shown into a dingy, overheated room furnished with a table, some wooden seated chairs, and nothing else. Into it came Adrian, escorted by a warder—and Diana's first thought was that though they had been admitted neither she nor her godfather was welcomed. Adrian was perfectly composed, a shade more abstracted than his wont, but too well she understood the brief glance he gave her before looking away. There was question in it, and certainty of the answer. A hard lump came into her throat and remained there.

"Well, my boy!" Blundell's voice, in trying to be natural, was gruffer than usual. "What have they been doing to you? Come on, give us the whole story."

Adrian looked at him, but did not speak till they had taken seats at the table, Diana and Blundell on one side, the warder at the end. Then he removed his glasses, polished them, and gave a faint shrug.

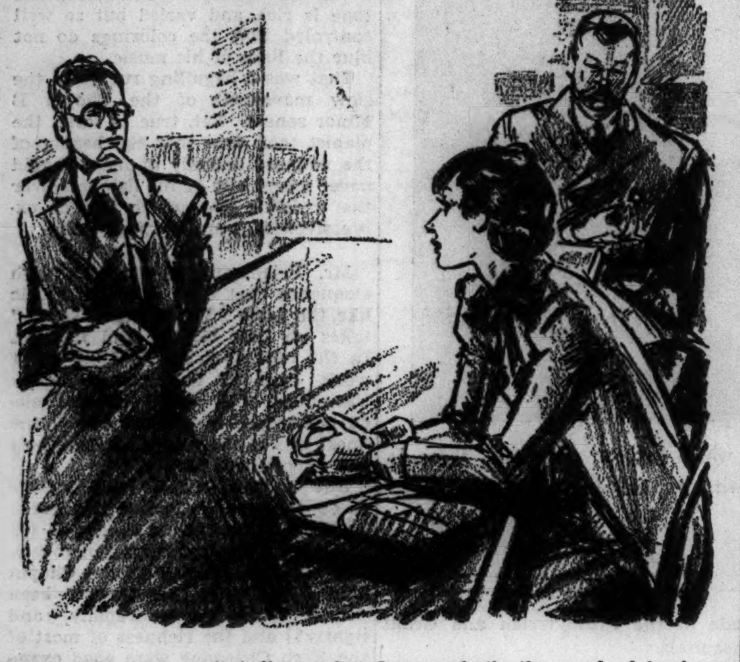
"As you see," he said uneventfully, "I've been arrested. For murder. That's about all there is to it."

"All! But on what grounds?" demanded the solicitor truculently. "Man, they can't lock you up without reason! What's the evidence?"

Adrian made no attempt to answer the question. After another glance at his two visitors, as though to establish something in his own mind, he remarked that he had been advised to secure counsel.

"Why, I can't imagine." He seemed to be addressing no one in particular. "If they won't believe what I say, what's the good of having a lawyer say it for me?"

"Why?" he mused aloud. "Who guessed it wasn't a natural death?"



How like Adrian! Diana made a despairing gesture, but let Blundell speak for her.

"Now, what sheer bilge!" Blundell was growing discomfited, consequently irritable. "See here, don't you realize our one idea is to get you a square deal? Why do you suppose I did my damndest to bail you out?"

Adrian looked at him again, this time with a slight frown.

"You tried to bail me out?" he repeated slowly. "I didn't know that. I can't quite see your reason, but—thanks again."

"Reason be blowed!" Blundell pushed back his chair, got up, and strode towards the door. "Look," he said, turning. "Maybe if I'm out of the way Diana can talk some sense into you."

Diana felt intensely grateful for the considerate action, but when the door had banged and she was left with only an indifferent warder to hear she was as badly tonguetied as before. Adrian, facing her, might have been a total stranger.

The warder was looking boredly at his watch. Diana clenched her hands to keep back the tears, and leant forward persuasively.

"Adrian dear, I'm sorry you weren't pleasanter to Uncle Nick. He's being so decent to us both—and when you think how he felt about her, can't you see what that means?"

His eyes met hers. "Why," he asked, "do you say both of us? You've told him ——?"

"I had to. I've let the flat, you see, and Uncle Nick has most kindly insisted on my staying for the present in Aunt Rose's place. He arranged this interview. He's willing to help in every way, and O, darling, we may need lots of help! Surely you understand?"

"Of course." He pondered, trying, she thought, to sift out some problem. "As for the matter you mentioned," he resumed, coldly, and with even greater constraint, "you and me . . . well, I want you to consider it finished. Washed up. In fact, you've got to look at it like that. I appreciate your coming here, but don't do it again, will you? And I particularly ask you to stay away from the court. Promise?"

"O, dear!" Her voice broke. "Why must you be so utterly stupid? Nothing's altered. Nothing!"

Once more he looked at her, and this time what she saw in his eyes sent a cold shock through her.

"Adrian!" she whispered unsteadily. "What is it? I've got to be told!"

He shook his head.

"It won't do any good," he said quietly. "I want you to keep clear of this whole business. Forget about—everything. Hadn't you better be going?"

She had always known he had this streak of obstinacy in him. It frightened her, but she held her ground.

"Not till I've made you listen. Hasn't it ever occurred to you that you aren't the only person who might have hoped to profit by Aunt Rose's death? Think it over now. Who did you tell me was mad? Loony was the word you used. Now, have you got it?"

"You're dreaming," he said after a long pause.

"Wait till you've heard." Diana talked rapidly in a lowered voice, sketching in the same points she had mentioned to Blundell. "Well, then," she finished triumphantly, "doesn't all this impress you?"

"Ridiculous," he summed it up. "Nothing in it. Can't be."

"O, Adrian, how dense you're being! It's got to be proved, naturally, but I can see it, as clearly as anything. She's hiding herself because she's terrified. Her plan went on the rocks."

"Why?" he mused aloud. "Who guessed it wasn't a natural death?"

"How do I know?" Diana spoke impatiently. "The caretaker, maybe. Some distant relation who's keeping himself dark. Listen, I've not done yet. There's something I've not told any one, because it seemed too utterly fantastic, only after last night it looked less so. You see, all along I've felt it was no common thief who killed my mother. I can't believe in this robbery motive. More and more I've come to think she may have been got rid of—O, how horrible it sounds!—because she had said something that threw Aunt Rose's murderer into a panic. Had you thought of that as a possibility?"

She saw him flinch.

"No. I hadn't. I'm sorry you've got that idea."

He had misinterpreted her again.

"O, please!" she begged, almost voiceless with misery. "Surely you must see what I'm trying to suggest. Remember what I've just been telling you, about the afternoon Mummy went to that flat. Keep in mind the things she may, without meaning to, have hinted—when she was talking to Uncle Nick—and remember it had to be some one who knew the workings of our street door. O, dear, what's the use? I must simply say all this to your lawyer, when you've got one. He'll listen. I'll make him."

Every word she uttered was serving to make matters worse.

More gently Adrian said: "I understand there is a barrister coming around today. Also the American consul-general—though he can't do much. It's no use cabling any of my friends. There's no one I can apply to for help in these hard times. Ladbroke—he's the house surgeon at the Prince Regent's—has arranged about the lawyer. You've met Ladbroke, I think. Blond chap, terribly decent."

She felt a slight degree of relief.

"Then that part of it's all right. Thank heaven! O, darling, they can't possibly do anything to you! How can they?" She made a last wistful appeal, and then, as he remained silent: "Adrian! Haven't you a single thing to say to me before I go?"

They were both on their feet, the table between them.

"Only what I've already said: Keep clear of that court."

It was like him, she told herself, to want to spare her the pain of seeing him stand before a magistrate, just as it was like him to repudiate the tie of their engagement while he was under a cloud; but these reflections left her unconsoled, her fears the more frightening because of their intangibility.

WOMEN'S AND MISS' HOUSE FROCK.

Either slender or mature figures may wear this home frock with equally chic results. The model is so cleverly paneled that it flatters slim silhouettes and conceals overweight. Although this dress is designed especially for hours spent in the home, no woman need be ashamed to receive callers when she is wearing it, because it has all the charm of a street frock. The shirtwaist collar is trimmed with a neat, tailored bow. The puffed sleeves are fitted into tight bands, and are trimmed with rickrack braid, as is also the hemline. The skirt flares gracefully.

Style No. 3441 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material, with 8¼ yards of braid.

If Dream Girl Loves Another Be Good Sport

BY DORIS BLAKE.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

When the girl you love loves some one else, what are you to do and say?

It's Joe's plight. And how he loved that girl! For a year it was one sweet period of enchantment.

"How could it have happened?" he asks. "True, I was moved to another city because of a better job and earlier marriage prospects, but I got to see her quite frequently over weekends. Until a month ago everything ran along smoothly, too smoothly, as I see it now. The day following that last meeting I got the bad news in a letter telling me we were through. She hoped we would remain good friends. But there was some one else she had been seeing during all the time I'd been away. Why do women want you to remain good friends after they hand you the worst hurt a fellow can get?"

Why do women want to remain on terms of friendship after a jilting party, Joe? We don't know. Balm to their pride, we suppose. It's nicer to leave a friend behind than an enemy. It isn't always intent to hurt, either, Joe, in cases of the sort. It may pain the girl considerably to have to break the bad news. It would, therefore, ease her conscience to feel that the bad news didn't completely alienate, that you might understand.

You see, Joseph, you can't take these blows as an insult to your character or charms. Love has a queer way of intruding itself into quarters seemingly already inhabited, as in your case. No one is to blame. Not the girl. Not you. Fate, if you will.

In any event, the break is sharp and clean. You're dismissed. Take it so, anyway, and hop right in where you'll meet a new girl. There's no cure for a heartache like a substitute girl. Only to help along the cure, don't go railing at fate or at yourself for losing Miss No. 1. Keep the road clear for the second adventure.

Culbertson's "Gold Book of Bidding and Play"

Herewith is presented another portion of Mr. Culbertson's latest work on contract, the "Gold Book of Bidding and Play," which is being reproduced in this column in daily instalments.

RAISES.

[Copyright: 1937: By Ely Culbertson.]

Whether full or shaded, every raise requires adequate trump support: Q x x or any four trumps.

The number of winners in the hand is determined by counting the values in honors, long suits, and short suits. For those who find it easier to look only for the honor tricks and short suits the following case method may be used.

Raise once with adequate trump support and one honor trick with a singleton, one and one-half honor tricks with a doubleton, two honor tricks if 4-3-3-3.

Give a shaded raise with adequate trump support and a singleton, even without any honor trick, or with one-half an honor trick and a doubleton, one honor trick if 4-3-3-3. [Sometimes one no trump should be preferred if holding only three trumps.]

The following hands are minimum shaded raises of partner's opening one spade bid, only if the intervening player has passed:

♠ Q 3 2 ♥ 8 ♦ 10 8 6 5 3 ♣ 9 7 5 2
♠ 8 6 5 3 ♥ 6 2 ♦ K 8 5 4 ♣ 8 5 2

TODAY'S HAND.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 no trump	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

West correctly chose to open the spade queen. Declarer won the first trick, and played the ace and another heart with the hope of finding an adverse 3-3 split. West's failure to follow to the second round scotched this plan, and made the passing of the heart futile. Dummy's king was played, and now dummy played a diamond, declarer's probable intention being to pass the trick if possible, and play for a 3-3 diamond split. East put up the ten, however, and since declarer did not want to lose three heart tricks on the spot, he won with the king.

Apparently deciding now that the club guess was the last resort, declarer arbitrarily selected East as the holder of the club queen, and led to dummy's king. The jack was returned and, to declarer's horror, East showed out. From that point the contract was a lost cause, for there was no way to snaffle the ninth trick.

Only reasonably good play was required on this hand in order to "sail in." Declarer could well have afforded to concede a few losers at the outset. Had he done so, a count of the defenders' hands would have emerged automatically. Obviously, if declarer had ducked to the first trick, the jack would be continued, and now the ace would win. Now, either a diamond or a heart should be conceded. Let us assume the former. A low diamond is led. West plays the nine, and East overtakes with the ten, continuing the suit. Declarer wins, West showing out, and now cashes the ace and king of hearts. West's failure to follow to the second heart establishes him for having held two singletons, and now, when declarer cashes his other spade trick, East's failure to follow marks West with an original holding of five spades and thus he must have held six clubs. Unless the queen drops from East's hand on the lead of the ace, the finesse against West is established. Certainly this is a better plan than guessing!

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: Dealer opened the bidding with one club. What should second hand bid with the following: ♠ A K 8 6 ♥ K Q J 10 ♦ K Q J 7 ♣ 5?

Answer: Two clubs.

In-Between Is Going Through "Silly" Stage

Ridiculous Antics His Way of Expressing Himself.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

Do they seem impossibly silly—to you?

Do they utter some gibberish and then rock with laughter?

Do they hold forth in eloquent diatribe against the effete custom of washing before meals, or in fact at any time at all?

Do they seem to be geniuses in their ability to invent ways to make noise?

Do they discourse upon how they would love to eat with their fingers and send all table manners to limbo?

Do they obviously walk past funny papers scattered all over the floor, sweaters and mufflers draped over the best chair, rubbers and gloves underfoot?

Do they talk back and forth in what seems to you an utterly inane fashion?

Do they recite the most idiotic poems and then go into peals of laughter?

Do they lie on their backs like foolish pups and kick their heels into the air?

Do your children have spells of doing all of these things and more, and make you wonder if they are quite, quite normal after all? [Haven't you seen grownups get pretty silly sometimes, too? Or been that way yourself?]

Don't fret. You will weather it if you will just realize that it all is part of the carefree, lively, happy process of being a child, and most probably of being a boy between the "little boy" age and that of the early adolescent.

Don't take it hard. Let them alone. Fortunately [or unfortunately] they will get over it and grow up. You even may, if you have a sense of humor and a love of nonsense, enjoy their antics. And if you just will stop being a parent for a while, you'll find that sometimes they are really and truly funny.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

That three hour Red Cross relief appeal over NBC the other evening dripped with glamor and glitter. But it was full of gaping holes nevertheless. Some time [we hope] the bosses of broadcasting will realize that it takes more than a promise of a word from Clark Gable and Carole Lombard, or Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence to keep a coast to coast audience cupping the ears. A parade of the brightest names and voices of Hollywood and Broadway is useless if they have nothing to say. And the personal story of even a single refugee would have outweighed far the longwinded exhortations of Will Hays to get behind the Red Cross and push.

Most effective contributions were made by Irvin S. Cobb, who is personally touched by the flood because of relatives in Paducah, Lum and Abner, and Bob Burns, for whom Arkansas is still more or less home. Most lamentable—the vulgarities of Bert Lahr.

For effective flood relief work WLS' activities are worth a mention. Its forthright appeals have brought in a flood of cash which yesterday passed the $56,000 mark. Contributions have come from as distant a point as Saskatoon, Sask.

Some one at WLS deserves a rebuff for the handling of Minnie Mouse on Saturday evening. A flock of listeners have complained that Minnie's lovely soprano voice was all but drowned out by the continuous chattering of Uncle Ezra and the master of ceremonies during her performance.

Nelson Eddy's broadcast for next Sunday will be aired from local CBS studios. It will be useless for admirers to gather about the Wrigley building, his representatives have announced, since no studio audience will be permitted. Mr. Eddy has a concert scheduled for Chicago a week or two later and would rather meet his partisans there. This broadcast was to have been given at Cincinnati, but has been shifted here because of the transportation difficulties in the flood area.

Clyde Lucas and his orchestra will take over the W-G-N-Mutual wire at the Drake hotel Feb. 12. Dick Jurgens' band, there since last October, will go on tour. . . . And Hugo Mariani will supplant Al Kavelin on the same channel from the Blackstone beginning Friday.

The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's Sunday afternoon discourses are to be aired locally over WJJD. First pickup from the Royal Oaks shrine is scheduled from 3 to 4 next Sunday.

Some Dog.

My employer recently told this story:

"You know that I have always said that I thought my old dog Sport was the smartest dog that ever lived—well, now I know he is. Do you know that when we were out hunting the other day he was working about 100 yards ahead of us when suddenly he stopped, literally frozen in his tracks, apparently on point. My hunting partner and I, thinking that he had found quail, hurried forward to be in position to shoot, but when we were almost up to him, he suddenly turned, looked at us, and was on his way in the opposite direction. When we got up to where he had been, what do you suppose we found? Some one had nailed a "No Trespassing" sign on a tree just over the fence, and that dog was so smart that he stopped stock still when he read it, knowing that he would be breaking a law if he went any further. I have heard of dogs that could count, and dogs that could sing, but old Sport is the only dog I ever heard of that could read well enough to keep out of trouble."—F. B. C., Chicago.

Weak, Rundown Nervous, Ailing?

How Thousands of Worn-Out, Pale, Sickly Folks Are Building Themselves Into Strong, Red-Blooded Men and Women!

Seedol Kelpamalt, New Mineral Concentrate From the Sea—Rich in Natural Iodine—Should Give You, Too, New Strength, Energy and Endurance, Even in First Week or No Cost!

Here's new hope and encouragement for thousands of tired, weak, worn out, haggard-looking men and women whose energy and strength have been sapped by overwork and worry, who are nervous, irritable, always half-sick and ailing. Science has at last placed its finger on what is frequently one of the principal causes of this dangerous, rundown condition—IODINE STARVED GLANDS. When these glands don't work properly, all the food in the world can't help you. You just do not get nourishment from what you eat.

The most important gland—the one which actually controls strength and body-building—needs a definite ration of iodine all the time—NATURAL ASSIMILABLE IODINE—not to be confused with chemical idodides which often prove toxic. Only when the system gets an adequate supply of iodine can you regulate metabolism—the body's process of converting digested food into firm flesh, new strength and energy.

To get this vital mineral in convenient, concentrated and assimilable form, take Kelpamalt—now recognized as one of the world's richest sources of this precious substance, yielding iodine in greater abundance than oysters, spinach or lettuce.

Without Cost—Make This Iodine Test

First see how long you can work or how far you can walk without tiring. Then take 3 Seedol Kelpamalt Tablets with each meal for one week and notice how much longer you can work without tiring, how much farther you can walk. Notice how much better you feel, sleep and eat. Watch for increased energy, vigor and endurance. See how your skin clears up, ordinary stomach distress is relieved, how scrawny hollows fill out. If you do not gain in endurance, strength and energy the first week, the trial is free. Your own doctor will approve this way. Seedol Kelpamalt costs but little to use. Try it today. Sold at all good drug stores.

NOTRE DAME TO BATTLE PURDUE FIVE TONIGHT

BRUINS DEMOTE PLAYERS AFTER CANADIENS WIN

1-0 Defeat Adds to Home Woes.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Burly Babe Siebert, former favorite of the Boston Bruins' top balcony patrons, scored a third period goal tonight to give the Montreal Canadiens a 1 to 0 National Hocky league victory over his former teammates before 15,000 at the Boston Garden.

Before he drove home his score, Siebert ruined many a threatening Boston rally. His goal was registered during the 47th minute of play, when he joined a rush launched by George Brown, who carried inside the Boston defense before passing left. Blake completed this pass, circled the net, and passed out to Siebert, who whirled and drove the puck past Goalie Tiny Thompson while the Bruins were short one man.

In their last seven home games the Bruins have lost six and tied one. Tonight's setback was their third in a row.

After the game Art Ross, the Bruin manager, demoted Peggy O'Neil and Lorne Duguid to the club's International American league farm, the Providence Reds, and recalled Milton Schmidt and Wilfred [Porky] Dumart. Lineup:

AURIE, WINGS TIE RANGERS

New York, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Detroit's Champion Red Wings came from behind twice to tie the New York Rangers, 4 to 4, at Madison Square Garden tonight. Larry Aurie, the National league's leading goal getter, rifled the puck into the New York cage three times.

Some 14,500 spectators saw Frankie Boucher shoot the Rangers in front in the first three minutes. Marty Barry balanced it 10 minutes later. The Rangers gained a two goal lead in the first half of the second period on shots by Butch Keeling and Alex Shibicky. Aurie then scored twice. The Rangers protested his second tally as the goal umpire did not flash the red light and the Rangers claimed it had not entered the cage. Referee Clarence Cambell ruled otherwise.

Babe Pratt gave the Rangers the lead for the third time early in the third period but Aurie again came to the Red Wings' rescue with a blazing shot from the left side.

NEW CLEVELAND SQUAD TO SEEK GLOVES CROWN

Only One Veteran Earns Trip to Chicago.

Final Examination

FINAL physical examination for Chicago Golden Gloves boxers will be held tonight at Trafton's gymnasium, 180 West Randolph street. More than 600 boys will report between 6 and 8 o'clock. All contestants who failed to report at previous examinations may report tonight, provided that they bring their parental consent cards.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Golden Gloves fans in Chicago hardly will recognize the Cleveland Plain Dealer's team when it goes into action in the Tournament of Champions at Chicago Stadium on Feb. 22.

This is quite unusual because the Cleveland veterans year after year have been in the thick of the battle for out of town team championship. The Clevelanders won two such trophies and tied for another.

One Champion Back.

But only one of this year's eight Cleveland champions has ever fought in the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., Tournament of Champions. That fellow is Billy Burke, who reached the quarter finals last year in the welterweight division. Billy again will fight in the welterweight division. The way he mowed down his opponents in the Plain Dealer's tournament indicates he may be a very stubborn foe for one and all in the 147 pound class.

John Joca, the Cleveland bantamweight champion, is a student at Collinwood High school. Patsy Guerra, the flyweight champion, is a former New York Golden Gloves battler. He is in Cleveland making a study of arc welding.

Brown Can Go.

Cleveland's best showman will be Leroy [Tiger] Brown. He fights in the middleweight division. He's not only a showman but a master boxer.

In Cleveland the fans believe the most formidable member of the team is Lem Franklin, who fights in the heavyweight ranks. Lem, a young giant, is a former hotel porter and while battling his way to the Cleveland championship put his four opponents to sleep. A vicious right to the chin was his favorite implement.

Another powerful blaster on the Cleveland team is Mike Minnich, light heavyweight, who also knocked out a half dozen foes while slugging his way to the title.

Log Wins at Hialeah for 5th Straight

Miami, Fla., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Sensational racing had the big crowd at Hialeah Park on edge this afternoon.

Log, 3 year old filly owned by Dale Shaffer of Chicago, scampered to her fifth successive victory in Florida this winter, when under the heavy impost of 120 pounds she won the Regret purse. After running head and head with Goldy F. until the stretch run started, Log moved away from her rival and won going away by half a length in the fast time of 1:10 4-5 for six furlongs.

Sally Shall, 2 year old daughter of Whiskaway, trained by Young Sherill Ward, traveled three furlongs in 33 seconds to equal the world's record when she won the 2 year old race that opened today's program. The world's record had been held jointly by Airflame and Balking, both owned by Alfred G. Vanderbilt.

Lady Highgloss scorched the track when she ran six furlongs in 1:10 to win the day's feature race by a length and a half from Marshall Field's Tintagal with Mrs. Emil Denemark's Grand Duke third.

Lady Highgloss missed equaling the track record by one-fifth of a second. She was in front most of the way.

The victory scored by Log made her one of the outstanding choices for the $25,000 Flamingo stakes to be run late this month. The Flamingo formerly was run as the Florida Derby and was won last year by Brevity.

Goldy F., never out of the money in 17 starts, ran gamely, had a four pound pull in the weights from Log, and had no excuses to offer. It was her third straight defeat at the hands of the fleet Chicago filly.

Talking It Over

BY ARCH WARD.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CHICAGO'S chance of getting the Joe Louis-Jim Braddock heavyweight championship fight probably will be decided today at the meeting of the New York boxing commission. . . . Despite positive announcements from Chairman Joe Triner of the Illinois athletic commission that the match will be presented at Soldiers' field on or about June 15 under the sponsorship of the Sporting Club of Illinois, arrangements still are in a nebulous stage. .. . It will be necessary to sign two fighters before the bout safely can be said to be set for Chicago. . . . At the moment only one has promised definitly to affix his signature. . . . He is Champion Braddock. . . . There are a few matters to attend to before Joe Louis, the man who will lure the customers, puts his name on the necessary documents. . . . Chief of these is the position of Mike Jacobs with the New York commission. . . . Mr. Jacobs, who holds promoter's rights to Max Schmeling as well as Joe Louis, has signed an agreement with Madison Square Garden to present the German at Long Island Bowl on the night of June 3 for a match with Braddock. . . . The New York commission says this contract is binding. . . . If Jacobs ignores his obligations to the New York commission and sends his other fighter, Louis, against Braddock in Chicago he may find himself persona non grata with the men who rule the game in the state upon which Jacobs must depend for major revenue. . . .

◆

If the match comes to Chicago it will be presented by the Sporting Club of Illinois, a nonprofit organization, which has Sheldon Clark, an oil official, at its head. . . . Mr. Clark asserted a few days ago that Braddock would be guaranteed $500,000. . . . It will be interesting to print a picture of Braddock's check for this amount, provided his percentage of the receipts does not reach that figure. . . . No fighter has been paid anything approaching that sum since the Tunney-Dempsey bout at Soldiers' field in 1927. . . . Joe Louis and Max Baer were the principals in the biggest boxing match since the famous long count battle and their share of the receipts was $217,337 for Louis and $181,114 for Baer. . . . If any guarantee is offered Braddock, and you may be sure it will not be $500,000, the money no doubt will come from Jacobs and his associates in the Twentieth Century Sporting club of New York. . . .

◆

As readers of these pages know, efforts to bring a heavyweight championship match to Chicago next summer have been under way for several weeks. . . . This department naturally would like to see an important fight or any other important sports event arranged for the city's Charter Jubilee celebration. . . . But we do not hold that the fate of the universe hinges on whether Braddock is a second rate heavyweight who stumbled into the world's championship on a fluke or whether Louis is just a flash in the pan. . . . It is even possible that a sizable percentage of the population could stagger through the summer without even seeing the names of the two young men in print. . . . At any rate, we have observed no manifestations of mob fever, such, for example, as irate citizens parading the streets demanding that entertainment be provided for the saps and suckers who are willing to pay $25 or more apiece to see the issue settled. . . .

◆

Ten Years Ago Today—Benny Devol, Wabash college star, revealed that he had been approached by gamblers to throw a basketball game to Franklin college. . . . The Montreal Maroons shut out the Chicago Blackhawks, 3 to 0. . . . Augie Kieckhefer, Otto Reiselt, and Art Thurnblad were tied for first place in the world's three cushion billiard tournament.

Ineligibility Costs Iowa's Swim Team Two Divers

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Arnold Christen of Hammond, Ind., and John Stark of Cedar Rapids, divers, were dropped from the University of Iowa swimming team today because of ineligibility. Iowa's next meet will be with Chicago at Chicago on Feb. 13.

Munn Signs to Assist Ossie Solem at Syracuse

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Ossie Solem, Syracuse's new football coach, tonight announced that he had signed Clarence Munn, head coach of Albright college at Reading, Pa., and former guard at Minnesota, as line coach.

BRADDOCK SIGNS WITH JACOBS FOR TWO EXHIBITIONS

Will Box Two Opponents on Feb. 15.

New York, Feb. 2.—[Special.]—In the midst of the controversy surrounding James J. Braddock and his proposed title defense today the champion agreed to engage in two exhibitions at the Hippodrome on Feb. 15.

Promoter Mike Jacobs announced Braddock has consented to box Eddie Kotwisca of Garfield, N. J., former amateur champion of New Jersey, and Eddie Cook, Havana protégé of Luis Gutierrez, former manager of Kid Chocolate.

The length of the exhibitions will be either two or four rounds each, depending on the attitude of the state athletic commission. The preference is for two, although the commission has a rule against sparring bouts of less than four rounds. Jacobs will go before the commission tomorrow to ask that the four round rule be waived.

Contract Permits Exhibitions.

At first it was thought arranging these exhibitions was a direct challenge to the jurisdiction of Madison Square Garden under its contract calling for Braddock to defend his title against Max Schmeling on June 3. This contract is considered the only barrier to the proposed Braddock-Joe Louis fight in Chicago. The contract, however, gives the champion permission to engage in exhibitions, subject to the approval of the Garden. It is not expected that the Garden will object to the Hippodrome bouts.

Tomorrow's commission meeting is expected to have a direct bearing on Braddock's next title fight. Joe Gould, Braddock's manager, will request the return of his $5,000 forfeit guaranteeing the champion's appearance against Schmeling next June.

More Conferences Today.

Jacobs, who has exclusive rights to Louis' services and is a partner with the Garden in the Braddock-Schmeling fight, returned to the city from Chicago late last night and held numerous conferences today. He refused to make any statement, however, except to say the Chicago fight was up to Gould, who accepted the $500,000 Chicago offer last week.

"If Gould tosses off half a million dollars, he's silly; and I don't think Gould is very silly," Jacobs said.

Jacobs planned further conferences with Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Madison Square Garden board of directors, whom he met today.

Meanwhile, Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's American representative, threatened to sue all interested parties.

Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the state athletic commission, insisted that the contract could not be broken legally.

Jimmy Can't Forget Pastor.

James J. Johnston, the Garden promoter, suggested that, since Braddock was running out on his recognized challenger, the heavyweight title should be declared vacant, and that the commission recognize a bout between Schmeling and Bob Pastor, the New York contender, as a championship match.

Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, said that Gould had not officially notified the Garden that the champion would not meet Schmeling as agreed.

Joe Jacobs was of the opinion that Mike Jacobs and Griffis had agreed to sidetrack Schmeling at a conference last Wednesday and that the plot was hatched without the knowledge of Kilpatrick and Johnston. He added that in his opinion Mike, Gould, and the others had no intention of staging the fight in Chicago, but were using Sheldon Clark and the Illinois commission to force Gen. Phelan and the New York commission to recognize Louis as the No. 1 challenger.

Schmeling, in a cable today, inquired as to the identity of Dennis Scanlon, who arrived in Berlin Sunday to propose that the German government promote the Braddock-Schmeling bout in the Olympic stadium. On the same day Gould announced the champion would fight Louis in Chicago. When Scanlon, for-

HERE AND THERE.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Feb. 2.—One can hardly blame the United States government for requiring full time of officers whom it has educated and provided with technical training at West Point. Yet one does dislike to see men of the caliber of Maj. Lawrence [Biff] Jones and Maj. Robert [Bob] Neyland retire from the service and its conservative remuneration for more lucrative football coaching posts.

BIFF JONES.

The Wake is not as well acquainted with Maj. Neyland as with Maj. Jones, but we can vouch for the genial "Biff," who has just been appointed Dana Bible's successor at Nebraska, as a chap whom you like to know and to keep on knowing.

Formerly army officers assigned to colleges with R. O. T. C. units were permitted to coach football teams at such colleges with additional compensation. Such permission has been revoked. Hence Majs. Jones and Neyland, now at Tennessee, resigned to continue their coaching careers. We do not know about regulations regarding return to the army, but assume they would lose all seniority ratings, hence retirement may mean a lifetime decision.

We feel no inclination to criticize. Probably in the present state of peace no great harm would be done if officers were allowed to coach football as formerly. It might be unfortunate for morale, however, and lead to charges of favoritism if certain officers were stationed where extra emolument was secured. So the whole question is just one of those things which come up in governmental work.

Azucar, whose Spanish name means sugar, winner of the richest stake in American turf history, the Santa Anita handicap of 1935, is racing at Hialeah. So far the converted jumper which F. M. Alger Jr. bought several years ago for $7,000 from Joseph E. Widener, master of Hialeah, has not shown the speed or stamina which was his two years ago. The gelding, however, is one of the seventy-nine nominations for the $50,000 handicap to be run March 6, final day of the Hialeah meeting.

Turf Writer Buck Weaver of Louisville conducted a poll of thirty-six "experts" for their present choice of the Kentucky Derby winner, to be run May 8 at Churchill Downs, at present under water in the Ohio river flood. Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Reaping Reward, seen at Arlington Park last summer as a 2 year old, was the favorite of seventeen guessers, including French Lane and The Wake; Pompoon was second and Brooklyn third. Here is the tabulation:

Reaping Reward, 17; Pompoon, 8; Brooklyn, 7; Case Ace, 2; War Admiral, 1; Mauritius, 1.

Others named as likely to finish in the money were Privileged, Maedit, Matey, Orientalist, Bottle Cap, Dawn Play, Riparian, Gerald, Billionaire, Flying Cross, and Heelplay.

But so many things—oh, so many things—may happen between now and May 8.

BOTH COACHES PLAN TO START NEW LINEUPS

Order Lambert to Stay in Bed.

Games Tonight

North Dakota at Iowa.
Purdue at Notre Dame.

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—The Notre Dame-Purdue basketball game tomorrow night rapidly was assuming the aspects of a major football contest today.

All the 5,500 tickets were sold ten days ago, establishing a new record here. The athletic association offices were swamped today with last minute applications. The Notre Dame band polished up its tooting in a drill this afternoon, preparatory to tomorrow night's concert.

Lambert Is Sick.

And Purdue even obliged by coming up with a bear story. Coach Ward Lambert is ill with a heavy cold and has been ordered to remain at home. Frank Getchell, who was to have umpired the game, reported that he would be unable to attend because of an attack of flu. He will be replaced by Nick Kearns. Frank Lane will referee.

Coach George Keogan, who has to hold practice sparingly and in shifts, since his entire squad has not been available at any one time during the last week, held a chalk talk and a light drill today. Examinations, which ended last night, precluded organized practice since last Thursday.

Switch Nowak to Center.

Keogan announced a last minute shift intended to match Purdue's height at center, where Co-Capt. James Seward stars. Paul Nowak, who was moved to forward two weeks ago, will return to center where his 6 feet 6 inches are a better match for Seward's height if not his jumping ability. John Moir, who has led the Irish in recent victories at center, will return to forward. Capt. Ray Meyer will be at the other forward, with Earl Brown Jr., a sophomore, and Tommy Wukovits, at guards.

New Men May Start.

Lambert indicated tonight that a new starting alignment was apt to be sent against Notre Dame. Three sophomores, who have had little chance thus far, may start. Harry Zink and Dale Hutt are slated for the forwards; Co-Capt. Jim Seward at center, and Carrol Mangas and Ross Dean at the guards.

HOOSIERS LOSE PLAYER

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Indiana university's hopes for a comeback in the Western conference basketball race received another setback today when it was learned that Willie Silberstein, reserve forward, had withdrawn from school.

Merle Thompson, St. Louis featherweight, tonight will make his Chicago debut in a ten round windup against Leo Rodak at Majestic arena, 5247 Madison street. The agreed weight is 128 pounds. Thompson comes here in possession of an excellent record, a record which includes triumphs over Armand Sicilia and Henry Huerta. Rodak conquered Sicilia for the second time this season in last week's windup at the Majestic.

In the five round semi-final Lorenzo Lovings, former Catholic Youth organization lightweight title holder, has been substituted for Harry Booker against George Dixon II. The latter defeated Lovings in a previous meeting a week ago.

Two of three encounters at four rounds involve Hal Mollison and Jack McCarter, junior welterweights, and Steve Padon and Vince Satkoff, welterweights. A wrestling exhibition also is scheduled.

Bert Rubi, light heavyweight wrestler, and Charley Grubmyer, Kansas City, Kas., will meet in a headliner at Rainbo Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue, tonight. The match, which is booked for 90 minutes, was arranged after Rubi threw Mike Kilonis and Grubmyer pinned Ivan Rasputin on last week's program. Frankie Talaber, north side 165 pounder, faces Tony Falletti in the semi-windup set for 30 minutes. Talaber is undefeated in a five months' professional campaign. Frankie Hart meets Al Williams, George Mansor clashes with Andy Moen, and Jerry Meeker hooks up with Stan Novak.

Eddie and Johnny Helstrom, lightweight twins from the north side, will top tonight's amateur show at the 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue. Eddie is paired with Lou Angelucci and Johnny with Red McGregor. Ray Wozniak, ex-C. Y. O. titleholder, and Ryder Tindberg, Trafton's gymnasium, clash, as do Don Peck and George O'Brien. Wrestling encounters bring together George Kontales and William Albert, and Elmer Lenhardt and Sam Trampators.

Bernie Bowman, Chicago heavyweight, and Sam Savoldi yesterday were matched in the five round secondary feature of the program headed by Maurice Strickland and Art Oliver at Marigold Gardens Monday. . . . William Thomas, Illinois Athletic club welterweight champion, and Verne Patterson have agreed to meet for five rounds in the amateur show at the Madison Athletic club Friday. . . . It is indicated that the contemplated fight card at the Stadium Feb. 12 will be canceled. . . . Max Marek is considering an offer to meet Tony Shucco at Boston on a date to be chosen. . . . Charley Belanger, veteran Winnipeg, Man., boxer, stopped off here yesterday en route to California where he expects to box Maxie Rosenbloom in two weeks. Belanger has been inactive since he suffered a rib fracture at Marigold Nov. 30. . . . Plans to enlarge the Marigold arena will be started March 20. F. M.

Record A. B. C. Entry Revives Split Meet Plan

Columbus, O., Feb. 2.—(AP)—John E. Davies, vice president of the American Bowling congress, said today that the record entry of 3,200 teams for the New York tournament, scheduled March 10 to April 30, had revived suggestions that the national event be divided into eastern and western sections, with the winners of each meeting in a world series.

Heaviest pressure for a split, Davies said, has come from the west coast, which never has had the meet.

Elmer H. Baumgarten of Milwaukee, secretary of the A. B. C., predicted here at the 1933 tournament which attracted 1,597 teams, that the classic was growing to such an extent that splitting of the tourney into two sections would be a necessity.

The plan proposed by Baumgarten was that tournaments be held simultaneously east and west of the Mississippi, each having its own prize list, with the winners meeting in a roll-off at one of those cities for the championships.

A program made up largely of novelty acts will be given in support of the Central United States ski championship competition at Soldiers' field Sunday. The feature events will include ski jumping lessons, a dog team race and an exhibition in which a ski-equipped automobile is used.

Karl Nelson, president of the Central United States Ski association, will instruct novice jumpers with veterans illustrating the points he makes. Earl Hammond and two Eskimos will give an Alaskan number, ski joring behind both dogs and reindeer. He also will mush in a three team race with Eddie Barbeau and his wife, Kay Barbeau, sledgers who have competed in northern Minnesota and Canada.

Flash Williams will give the car act. Norval Baptie and Gladys Lamb, fancy skating team; Duke and Noble, ice comedians, and members of the Chicago Figure Skating club also will appear.

New York, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Jake Schaefer of Chicago broke the American high run record for 28.2 balkline billiards, established earlier in the day by Willie Hoppe, as he increased his lead in their 2,500 point match at the Strand Academy to 750-627 tongiht. Schaefer won both afternoon and evening blocks, 250 to 230 and 250 to 157. He made his record run at the start of tonight's block. He scored 113 points, which were added to his unfinished run of 15 at the end of the afternoon block. Earlier Hoppe had made a run of 123 to shatter the previous record he had set up in their match at Chicago last week.

Judge Dismisses Jury in Ederle Suit for $50,000

Mineola, N. Y., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—After more than ten hours deliberation the jury which has been hearing testimony in the $50,000 negligence suit brought by Gertrude C. Ederle of Hempstead, English channel swimmer, against the Justine Apartments, Inc., of Hempstead, reported to Supreme court Justice Thomas J. Cuff here this evening that it was "hopelessly deadlocked." Judge Cuff then dismissed the jury. Miss Ederle sued over injuries she claims she received on Dec. 12, 1933, when she tripped and fell on a piece of loose tile.

Braddock to Fight Twice for Jacobs

mer manager of Sonja Henie, the ice skater, sailed, Gould said he was to represent him in negotiating the proposed Berlin bout.

Mike in New Light.

Mike Jacobs now enters the situation as the go-between in what, on the surface, appears to be a trade which would satisfy certain interests in the Garden, eliminate Schmeling and make Louis heavyweight champion.

Ancil Hoffman, Max Baer's manager, today tentatively agreed to terms with Johnston for a fight between Baer and Pastor on March 19. Johnston said the agreement was reached by telephone and expected confirmation tomorrow.

"The arrangement is subject to cancellation or postponement of plans Hoffman said had been made for Baer to fight somebody in England this winter," Johnston explained.

WATCHFUL WAITING

While Chicago boxing fans wondered whether the proposed bout between Champion James J. Braddock and Joe Louis at Soldiers' field June 15 was on or off, Sheldon Clark of the Sporting Club of Illinois, Joe Triner, chairman of the Illinois boxing commission, and others connected with the promotion yesterday awaited developments in New York.

Meanwhile, Triner, Joe Foley, matchmaker for the Sporting club, and Julian Black, co-manager with John Roxborough of Louis, expressed confidence that the Louis-Braddock encounter would be held here.

Triner Analyzes Jacobs.

Chairman Triner said Mike Jacobs' announcement before he returned to New York Monday that "nothing was settled" can be taken with a grain of salt.

Jacobs, New York promoter, holds exclusive rights to Louis' services.

"It appears that Jacobs issued the statement to protect himself when he appears before the New York commission today," the chairman declared.

Co-Manager Black is of the opinion that Jacobs has accepted for the former Chicago Golden Gloves champion. He expects Louis to receive 20 per cent of the gate receipts.

"The match is 95 per cent made," Matchmaker Foley explained. "We've satisfied everybody concerned, including Jacobs. There's nothing more to do now until Gould is heard from. After his date with the New York board he is expected to come here and see what can be done about closing the match."

AMUNDSEN BEATS WALLER, 44-23; HARRISON STAR

Proviso, York Continue Victory Streaks.

George Harrison, high scoring star of the Amundsen High school junior basketball team, broke loose again yesterday to lead the north section squad to its fourth Chicago Public High School league victory of the season. Harrison, 5 foot 7 inch forward, who has averaged 16 points per game, flipped in eleven field goals and three free throws—good for 25 points—as Amundsen routed Waller, 44 to 23.

The triumph enabled Amundsen to tie Roosevelt for third place in the north division, each with four victories and one defeat. Lane Tech remained in first place by triumphing over Senn, 41 to 29, for its fourth consecutive victory. Von Steuben is in second place with three victories and no defeats.

Fenger, Farragut Lose.

With Harrison leading the attack, Amundsen took a 23 to 10 lead at the end of the first half in the game against Waller. The victors increased their margin to 38 to 15 at the third quarter.

Two sectional leaders, Fenger of the south and Farragut of the central, suffered their first league defeats. Fenger lost to Hirsch, 28 to 22, while Harrison defeated Farragut, 27 to 24, in an overtime game.

Proviso advanced a step closer to the Suburban league heavyweight basketball title by defeating New Trier, 43 to 17, on the latter's court yesterday.

Proviso Wins 8th Straight.

This victory was the eight in a row for the Maywood five. Proviso has rolled up 299 points to opponents' 166. The victory attack against New Trier was led by Mizen and Heileman.

In the frosh-soph circuit, Oak Park remained undefeated by triumphing, 25 to 17, over Morton and thereby scored its eighth straight victory.

The York lightweight and heavyweight basketball teams, undefeated leaders in the West Suburban conference race, were scared by Glenbard but managed to win both games in overtime.

The victories were the ninth straight for both teams, the lights winning 27 to 25, and the heavies 25 to 24.

Protest Overruled.

The disputed Leo-St. Rita lightweight basketball game of last Friday night will not be replayed, the Catholic High School league protest board decided last night.

Failure of the new electric scoreboard and time clock in the Leo gymnasium to function properly in the first three quarters at the time of the game last Friday evening was the grounds for the protest by St. Rita. Leo won, 30 to 23.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Gorilla Jones, middleweight boxer from Akron, O., was suspended for six months today by the Wisconsin boxing commission. The commission declared the Jones-Frankie Battaglia fight here Friday night was an "unsatisfactory one" and dealt out suspensions to every one connected with the bout except Battaglia and his manager.

The Mercantile A. C. Boxing club was suspended indefinitly, a sixty day suspension was imposed upon Joe Schweitzer, Milwaukee matchmaker, and a thirty day suspension upon Al Fain, acting manager of Jones.

Dean Picks Cards to Win –If He Signs

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Predictions flew thick and fast today when Dizzy Dean and a group of American leaguers got together, but the predictions were all Dizzy's.

"The Cards will finish first next season, provided I sign—if I don't they'll finish seventh or eighth," was his first offering.

He predicted the Detroit Tigers would return to the top in the American league with Hank Greenberg, out most of last season, back in the lineup.

The Others Listen.

Others in the group, on a beach outing, were Greenberg and Goose Goslin of Detroit, Jimmy Foxx of the Boston Red Sox and Lynn Lary, recently traded to Cleveland by the St. Louis Browns. They didn't have as much to say as Dizzy.

"We should have a good club this year," agreed Greenberg, but he wouldn't predict a pennant. "We'd like to meet the Cards in a series again."

Goslin, Foxx and Lary likewise shied from pennant predictions, except for Foxx's observation that "I'd hate for my life to depend on our winning the pennant."

"A new baseball trade is in the air," Dizzy resumed. "I'm trying to trade Branch Rickey for Tom Yawkey and I'll give Rickey my next year's pay to boot.

And He's in Shape.

"If I don't sign before the season starts, Frankie Frisch'll be nuts before the season's over.

"I'm in the best condition I've ever been in. I've been playing golf and fishing all winter, and I feel fine. I'll win as many games this season as I've averaged the last three."

HOGAN DOWN TO 240

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Francis Hogan, the plump Irishman, tripped into the Washington baseball club's office today and announced he was forfeiting the title of baseball's fat man. Hogan asserted proudly he had shed 25 pounds since last baseball season. He now weighs 240 pounds. "I expect to chop off another 20 or 25 pounds in the next month," he said. "Washington needs a good catcher, and I'm it. At 215 pounds I'll be an asset to the Senators for at least five years."

Owner Clark Griffith issued an ultimatum that Hogan must get under 225 pounds if he wanted bread and butter money from the Senators this season.

LAZZERI IS HOLDOUT

New York, Feb. 2.—(AP)—In the evening of a brilliant career, Tony Lazzeri today was planning his first holdout on the New York Yankees. He wants $16,000 to play second base this season. The Yankees offered him $12,000. This is what he received last season and every season since 1931, when he was cut $4,000 after a bad year.

"I've always taken what the club offered me without squawking," he said today. "I had a two year contract at $16,000 a year in 1930-1931. Things didn't go right the last year, and I took a cut. But I think I've made my comeback now and I'd like to get the cut back."

He's 7th to Seek Raise.

Lazzeri is the seventh Yankee player to ask for a raise. The others are First Baseman Lou Gehrig, Pitchers Johnny Murphy and Vito Tamulis, and Outfielders Joe DeMaggio, George Selkirk, and Jake Powell. None of these has signed yet.

Pitcher Irving [Bump] Hadley, who won 14 and lost only four last season, signed today and this became the first Yankee regular to come to terms.

The Yanks were celebrating this fact when their regular third baseman, Red Rolfe, came in from his home in Penacock, N. H., to have his right hand X-rayed. He has been bothered by a stone bruise and was ordered by Dr. Edwin A. Spies, club physician, to have the injured hand photographed. The results of the examination won't be known until tomorrow.

Burgess Whitehead, Giant second baseman, filed away his contract in the Giants' safe today.

Fritz Waskowitz Elected Husky Football Captain

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The University of Washington football team tonight elected Fritiz Waskowitz of Chicago captain for 1937. Waskowitz, a junior, contributed heavily to victories which led the Huskies to the Rose Bowl to play the Pittsburgh Panthers New Year's day. He is a half back.

Herman Visits Wrigley, but Doesn't Sign

Billy Herman, Cub second baseman and gas station proprietor at New Albany, Ind., arrived in the city yesterday on a mission which apparently was supposed to be a secret. He was in conference with P. K. Wrigley, president and owner of the club, presumably about rearranging the figures inserted in the contract mailed him ten days ago. Herman, however, denied that he even mentioned salary and the club officials issued similar assurances that the young man wasn't a holdout. Herman is supposed to have another talk with his boss, at the conclusion of which a contract will be signed.

Herman, it is reported, feels that the elimination of the bonus system in effect for a couple of seasons is the same as a trim in salary. The pay named in the contract submitted is said to be the same as he received last season but under the now abolished bonus system this pay increased from month to month if the player's work waranted.

The only signed contract arriving at the Cub offices yesterday came from Coach Red Corriden.

PATTY BERG WINS MEDAL HONORS IN MIAMI GOLF

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Patty Berg, red-haired Minneapolis, Minn., star, shot an 80, two under par, today to win medal honors in the Miami Biltmore women's golf tournament for the second consecutive year.

While three of her nearest rivals ran into trouble on the 550 yard 15th hole, Patty played the double dog leg in the prescribed par 5 to gain a good margin.

Their misplays on the 15th hole, the longest on the course, spent the accumulated strokes that would have allowed Jean Bauer, Marion Miley and Kathryn Hemphill to equal or better Miss Berg's round. The trio finished with 81's.

Match play over 18 holes starts tomorrow.

MARSHALL ENDS WORKOUTS FOR TITLE DEFENSE

Everett Marshall finished training yesterday at Trafton's gymnasium for his heavyweight title defense against Oki Shikina at the Coliseum tomorrow night. The champion, well tanned from his recent three weeks' sojourn in Florida, worked out with Danny Winters and several other partners and then put away his training equipment.

Billy Sandow, former manager of Ed [Strangler] Lewis, watched the workout. Sandow, who is directing Marshall's campaign, has been assured by Chairman Joe Triner of the Illinois athletic commission that Everett will not lose his title in the event Shikina uses forbidden holds, such as those practised in jiu jitsu.

Lukats Denies Marriage to South American Heiress

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Nick Lukats, former Notre Dame football star, today denied reports that he had been secretly married to Dorothy Proctor, heiress from South America. Lukats said, "It is true we are kind of engaged, and she likes me, I hope, but marriage is some distance off, because I must make good for myself in films first."

Bill Tilden Set to Begin Life at 44

Bill Tilden, who will lead his troupe of professional tennis stars into Patten gymnasium at Northwestern university Friday night, is a firm believer in the saying "life begins at forty."

Big Bill will celebrate his 44th birthday next Wednesday. At an age when most athletes are in retirement, Tilden is off on a tour of the country, in the course of which he will visit every state and will play on an average of four matches a week.

When asked if he did not feel that he was slowing up, he recently replied, "My legs may not be so hot any more, but I can still beat a lot of the boys." To prove this statement, he went out last fall and won the national professional singles championship from the pick of the country's pros.

Bill has been a tennis headliner since he won his first national amateur championship 17 years ago. For 10 years he was the world's leading amateur and for the last seven years he has been a professional star.

On his current tour he is accompanied by Taro Satoh, former champion of Japan; Vincent Richards, veteran American star, and Martin Plaa of France, former world's professional champion. Tilden will meet Satoh in a singles match while Richards and Plaa oppose each other. The four will then pair up for a doubles match.

U.S. Will Open Davis Cup Play Against Japan

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Japan will be the United States' opponent in the opening round of the North American zone competition for the Davis cup. This was made known today in an announcement by the British Lawn Tennis association's cup committee. The association also announced that twenty-four nations, same number as last year, had entered teams in the battle for the world's greatest tennis prize.

Also entered in the North American zone were Australia and Mexico, which will meet in the other portion of the first round. Japan's decision to compete in the North American matches is part of a plan by which the land of the rising sun aims to develop a team of young players within five years. The Australians and Americans already are favored to reach the zone final as they did last year, when the Anzacs won, 3 to 2.

Eight of the twenty countries, which nominated teams for the European zone, were drawn for the first round today, the others receiving byes. In the first round the pairings bring together Switzerland and Ireland, Hungary and Belgium, New Zealand and China, and Holland and South Africa.

Germany, headed by Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, now ranked the strongest individual threat since Fred Perry of England turned professional, is the choice to reach the finals of the European zone. France, which dominated the cup play until England came into its own in 1933, was drawn in the lower bracket, which includes such opponents as Jugo-Slavia and Czechoslovakia, both of which made strong showings in last year's zone play.

QUAIL, PHEASANT LIKE UNDERBRUSH FOR PROTECTION

They Sprint Well When Forced to Cover.

BY BOB BECKER.

Observation of quail and pheasants will show how these game birds rely on thick cover for a defense against enemies. When disturbed, they take to wing and head for hedge rows, weed thickets, heavy grass, briar thickets, brush piles or any kind of cover. Both species of birds will zoom into cover and then run. They are real sprinters so anyone expecting to find them near the place where they were seen to light, invariably is going to be disappointed.

A rather bold, sly bird, the pheasant also has one attribute that always gets our admiration. He's a scrapper. He'll fight anything from a barnyard rooster to a crow or a cat. Cock pheasants have been seen fighting both cats and crows on the Tribune farm. If a ringneck has sufficient cover handy we doubt if he is much afraid of the species of hawks that visit the experimental farm.

Quail Flies and Hides.

Give a ringneck a chance to dodge into a weed thicket, a tangle of vines and shrubs, or other cover and no hawk can bother him. But one of the men on the farm reported last season how he saw a hawk with its claws in a struggling pheasant, so apparently even the bold and capable ringneck sometimes is killed by feathered predators.

The quail hasn't any defence against enemies except flight and concealment. They do not want to stray far from patches of cover into which they can roar on speedy wings in case of danger. And when danger threatens it's everybody for himself. A covey will fly and scatter to come together later by means of whistled signals. Often we have heard this whistling in the fields when a covey was trying to gather its members together so that all would assemble on a night roost as a unit.

Has Speed On Ground.

The fact that the quail is not slow and awkward on the ground but, on the contrary, very fast on the sprint is another defense factor in its favor. When a sharpshinned hawk [for example] makes a raid and races after a frightened Bob White the quail is safe if it can zoom into a thicket because once it hits the ground it is off like a shot into even thicker vegetation through which no large bird can navigate.

The quail does not believe in turning its back to a possible enemy at night. The covey wants a "barricade" at the back of each bird. This may be a good sized tree. All the birds face towards the open so that there is a feathered circle facing outwards during the night when a cat, weasel or other enemy may try to get close enough for an attack.

SEEK BASKET GAMES.

The Five Star Athletic club basketball team is seeking games with girls' teams playing boys' rules. Laura W. Bishop, 4517 North Hermitage avenue, is coach.

MERGE CITY WPA RECREATION INTO SINGLE PROJECT

Co-ordinate Work for Enlarged Program.

Consolidation of all Works Progress Administration recreation projects in Chicago into one city-wide project under the sponsorship of the Chicago Recreation commission was announced yesterday by Dr. Philip L. Seman, chairman. This new project involves some 4,000 workers and a sum of more than $2,000,000.

"The members of the commission," said Dr. Seman, "at their regular monthly meeting at the Chicago Bar association adopted the plan requested by the federal government that all W. P. A. recreation be handled through the Chicago Recreation commission as the only legal sponsor for the Chicago area. This plan was worked out for the purpose of coordinating recreation, in the interest of best servicing the communities, through the various public and private sponsors of the operating projects, with the enlarged programs made possible by federal aid.

"In addition, the new project will economize on expenditures by reducing administration costs."

Reynolds Heads Committee.

Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of the Council of Social Agencies, was appointed by Dr. Seman to serve as chairman of a committee of the commission, which will handle the commission's sponsorship duties and act as the commission's representatives. This committee also will be advisory to other public and private groups and agencies seeking federal aid for recreation.

Other members of this committee are; V. K. Brown, chief of recreation, Chicago park district; Walter Wright, superintendent bureau of parks, recreation, and aviation; Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools; Agnes Nestor, president Woman's Trade Union league; Dr. Arthur J. Todd, head of department of anthropology and sociology of Northwestern university.

Advisory Groups Appointed.

Other committees appointed by Dr. Seman to serve as advisory for the individual agencies, both public and private, sponsoring subprojects of the large project, are as follows:

CHICAGO PARK DISTRICT—Walter Roy, chairman; Vernon F. Hernlund and R. V. Pierce.

MUNICIPAL PLAYGROUNDS—Theodore A. Gross, chairman; E. H. Blohm and Corrine Prucha.

"And what are little boys made of?"

Energy and appetite—a dash of mischief—a knack of wearing out clothes quickly, and getting dirty—and a big wholesome grin—that's what most little boys are made of!

Such little boys, and their sisters, too, ought to have a home with a big yard, where they can play in safety—a place where the air is fresh and pure, and the sunshine is not shut off by a murky pall of smoke and dust.

Hundreds of homes, ideally located, both in Chicago's residential districts and in the suburbs, are offered for sale in the Tribune want ad section.

No matter what your requirements are as to number of rooms, proximity to your job, the price you want to pay, the down payment, or terms of financing, you can be practically certain of finding the house you want among the offers in the Tribune want ad section.

TVA TO EXTEND SALE OF POWER; BARS MONOPOLY

Option Is Offered Private Utility.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The Tennessee Valley Authority announced tonight it had offered a 30-day option on an existing power agreement with Commonwealth and Southern companies if the companies believed an agreement on extension of the contract could be reached in that time. The existing contract is due to expire tomorrow.

W. L. WILLKIE.
[Acme Photo.]

The announcement said that "in offering the option the authority emphasized that no extension of the present contract could be made if the Commonwealth and Southern companies continued to insist upon receiving, as a condition of purchasing Tennessee Valley Authority power, an exclusive monopoly over Tennessee Valley Authority power in the area served by the companies."

Refuses Power Monopoly.

The TVA contended that it was the position of Commonwealth and Southern "that the TVA must give it a monopoly over TVA power, which would prevent the Tennessee Valley Authority from selling power to municipalities, rural coöperatives or industries in any part of the four states in which the Commonwealth and Southern operates.

"The authority is not empowered and should not be empowered to confer such a monopoly upon the private utilities of the southeast," TVA said. "The Tennessee Valley Authority statute, the constitutional and statutory rights of municipalities and other public agencies, as well as public policy, seems clearly to forbid such monopoly over public property.

Grants Time to Negotiate.

"The board stated to the Commonwealth and Southern that if it was the company's opinion that further discussions might result in a contract covering the sale and exchange of power only, then the Tennessee Valley Authority was willing to extend the present contract for the sole purpose of permitting such discussions."

The offer of the option was made to Wendell Willkie, president of Commonwealth and Southern, at a conference of Willkie and TVA directors in Knoxville, Tenn. The TVA statement made no mention of the companies' attitude on the offer.

The statement of TVA came a few hours after Senator Norris [Ind., Neb.] had urged that the agency end the contract. In talking with reporters, he said: "I can't see any reason for renewing that contract so long as TVA is tied up with injunctions."

MINNEAPOLIS FIRM ACQUIRES CHICAGOCONCERN

Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator company announced yesterday it has entered into an agreement for the acquisition of the business and assets of National Regulator company, 2301 North Knox avenue, Chicago, in exchange for 5,700 shares of 4 per cent convertible preferred stock, series B, of Minneapolis-Honeywell.

J. H. King, president of the Chicago company, said yesterday that present officers will be retained for the time being. The company is engaged in the manufacture of pneumatic control systems for use in public and large commercial buildings and self-contained regulators for use on steam, hot water, and warm air heating systems. Minneapolis-Honeywell has not previously made these types of instruments.

The preferred stock involved in the deal closed on the New York Stock exchange yesterday at $117, making the total consideration about $666,000.

FORECLOSURES LAST MONTH FALL TO SIX YEAR LOW

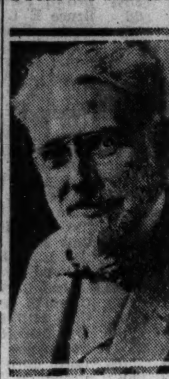
Foreclosures filed in the Superior and Circuit courts of Cook county during January were the fewest in number since November, 1930. The total amount involved was the lowest since 1929.

There were 537 foreclosures, totaling $4,643,649, filed last month. This compares with 601 foreclosures, totaling $6,791,882, filed during January, 1936. In December, 1936, there were 637 foreclosures, totaling $6,817,750.

The peak in foreclosures was $64,352,126, reached in December of 1931, when 1,044 cases were filed. In actual number of foreclosures filed during one month the high was reached in August of 1932, with 1,647 suits.

DohertyOffers 1¼ Million to End Fraud Suit

New York, Feb. 2.—[Special.]—From his sickbed in Philadelphia, Pa., Henry L. Doherty today made a compromise offer involving the payment of $1,250,000 or 250,000 shares of stock to the Cities Service company, to settle a minority stockholders' suit demanding recession of a $20,000,000 stock deal and an accounting of $80,000,000 alleged losses.



HENRY L. DOHERTY
[U. & U. Photo.]

There were two other points to the offer, made through Doherty's attorney. He asked that the stockholders of Cities Service seal the retirement of 1,000,000 shares of 5 per cent noncumulative stock that had been a bone of contention in the suit; and to confirm the termination of the fiscal agency and financial management relationship that once existed between Cities Service and Henry L. Doherty & Co.

Explains Compromise Offer.

Doherty explained he made the offer only because litigation, justified or not, was not good for any company and also for the reason that it would interfere with recovery of his health.

The six stockholders who brought the suit own 840 of the 38,000,000 shares of Cities Service stock now outstanding. They charged Doherty and his directors with making a $20,000,000 profit in sale of stock within the corporate holding structure.

Doherty's offer struck a responsive chord, and the stockholders' attorney, Percival E. Jackson, and Edwin W. Willcox of counsel for Cities Service, joined in an application for an adjournment of the trial of the suit.

Adjourns Trial of Case.

Federal Judge John W. Clancy therefore adjourned the case without date, pending action on the offer at the annual stockholders' meeting to be held April 27, or sooner if a special meeting is called.

"I feel sure that if I were able to appear in court, I could dispel any lingering doubts in the minds of any one as to the propriety and fairness of my own conduct toward the company and its stockholders and the fidelity of its officers and directors,' Doherty wrote. "I would not have it thought that any payment made by me to settle the present situation could be considered in the slightest degree as an admission of any remissness. And whatever I agree to do must be understood and carried out by you in such a way that the stockholders of this company and the public generally will understand this fact."

NORTH WESTERN, U. P. ASK TO BUY BIG BUS CONCERN

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Through a bus and truck company which they jointly control the Union Pacific railroad and the Chicago and North Western applied to the interstate commerce commission today for permission to purchase the Burlington Transportation company, operators of buses between Chicago and the Pacific coast.

The purchasing company, the Interstate Transit lines, which includes several subsidiaries and truck lines, already operates extensive bus service through the same territory, serving also St. Louis, Denver, and both Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The Union Pacific owns 70 per cent of the stock and the North Western the rest with the exception of five directors' shares. The applicant proposes to buy along with franchises 477 buses as well as service cars and stations. Included in the purchase, if it is approved, will be the Burlington's interest in a Chicago bus terminal.

STEEL EXPORTS IN 1936 LARGEST FOR SIX YEARS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Exports of iron and steel products from the United States reached the highest level attained since 1930 last year, figures made public today by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce indicated.

The total amounted to 1,221,663 tons valued at $88,062,559, compared with 959,646 tons valued at $65,363,748 in 1935. This represented a value increase of 35 per cent. In tin plate the 1936 figures were almost double those of 1935, a total of 235,583 tons, valued at $23,510,826 being shipped.

Scrap metal exports amounted to 1,941,031 tons in 1936 with a value of $24,681,634, against 2,103,959 tons in 1935 valued at $22,949,070.

New Canadian Air Line to Buy 15 U. S. Planes

New York, Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Trans-Canadian Airways, a new Canadian aviation transportation company, controled jointly by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways and existing aviation companies, will soon purchase in the United States twelve or fifteen modern airplanes costing between $700,000 and $900,000, it was learned here today.

The planes will cost not less than $60,000 each and will be purchased in this country because the United States has developed the type of machine needed for service between Montreal and Vancouver. Service will be inaugurated July 1.

May Buy Old Planes.

It is possible the corporation may buy at the outset some types of planes no longer used by large American transportation companies, such as the Condors of the American Air Lines and the Boeings of United Air Lines. Building new machines would require a year or more.

Aviation transportation equipment is not available in Canada on short notice, and Great Britain is too busy building planes for defense purposes, informed sources said.

A government bill providing for the organization of the new corporation to operate Trans-Canada Airways will be submitted to parliament in a few days.

Railroads Have Large Interest.

The Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National Railways will have a major interest in the new corporation, but it is understood the dominion government may insist on appointing four of the seven directors because of its $8,000,000 investment in landing fields.

The new service will carry mail and passengers, according to the announcement, and although no mention is made of express, it is probable that provision will be made for such freight.

Canadian Pacific's entrance into the aviation field widens the diversified interests of this corporation. Besides operating a railroad, it has hotels, mining enterprises, and recently embarked in the production of motion pictures.

SIX APARTMENT BUILDINGS SOLD TO ONE BUYER

One of the largest real estate transactions in recent months was completed yesterday when six properties, totaling 72 apartments, were sold by the Hercules Life Insurance company to William E. Fisher.

The properties were: A 24 apartment building at 3925-33 North Keeler avenue; an 18 flat structure at the northeast corner of Grace and Rokeby streets; a 12 flat at the southwest corner of Arthur and Hoyne avenues, and six apartments each at 7010-12 Clyde avenue, 6331-33 and 6337 Ridge avenue.

The considerations were not disclosed but there were six separate ten year 5 per cent mortgages made, aggregating $150,000. Albert A. Wilbur of Baird & Warner was the broker.

Fewer Passengers Ride Elevated During January

Travel on the Chicago Rapid Transit lines, the elevated, in January was 6.45 per cent below that of the same month of 1936, the company reported yesterday. The decline was attributed to an extra Saturday and Sunday this year, providing lighter trafic than on working days, and also because colder weather in January a year ago boosted travel on the "L" at that time.

U. S. COLLECTING MORE IN TAXES, SO BOASTS OF SMALLER DEFICIT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The government's deficit for the first seven months of this fiscal year was $1,745,758,978, a drop of $378,660,151 under the same period last year.

The decline, shown today in the treasury's month-end statement for January, reflected a substantial upturn in receipts and a decline in emergency spending.

Receipts for the period aggregated $2,442,131,892, compared with $2,129,974,388 last year. General expenditures were $2,462,978,140 and $2,338,876,389 for the respective periods. Emergency outlays were $1,724,912,730 and $1,915,517,128, respectively.

The gross debt at the end of January was $34,502,098,794, compared with $30,516,452,985 on the same date last year.

DELAY HEARING ON ROCK ISLAND REORGANIZATION

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Hearing on a plan for reorganization of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway before the interstate commerce commission was adjourned today until March 30 to allow interested parties time to prepare for cross examination.

W. H. Burns, general auditor of the road, submitted a report which disclosed that in 1936 the Rock Island had a deficit after interest and rent accruals of $13,118,590. The company had a deficit of $15,024,425 in 1935.

Estimates were made that on a basis of the present capitalization there will be a net loss of $10,194,761 for 1937. Gross revenues in 1937 are expected to be 4½ per cent over 1936. It is expected that net operating income this year will total about $4,025,167.

First National Bank Stock Again Rises to New Peak

McKinsey Buys Big Block of Field Stock

James O. McKinsey, chairman of Marshall Field & Co., has purchased 10,000 of the 50,000 shares of Field stock on which he has an option at $10 a share, it was learned yesterday.

JAMES O. McKINSEY
[Moffett Photo.]

At yesterday's market price of $20.50 on Field stock McKinsey's paper profit on the shares purchased is $105,000. At the present market his entire option has an indicated worth of $525,000.

McKinsey was given the option when he took over the chairmanship of the company in 1935. Under the original terms he was entitled to buy 50,000 shares at $10 a share after Oct. 1, 1936, and prior to Dec. 31, 1938, or in lieu of stock to receive in cash the difference between the option price and the market. He received a further option to buy an additional 50,000 shares between Dec. 31, 1937, and Dec. 31, 1940, at the book value of the stock at the end of this year.

Under a recent amendment to the first option, McKinsey agreed to purchase 20,000 shares before exercising his privilege of taking cash, and the time limit was extended to Jan. 10, 1939.

The 10,000 shares which McKinsey has purchased are the first he has acquired under options. The transaction was made within the last thirty days.

STOCKS FIRMER AS COURT OUSTS AUTO STRIKERS

Many Issues Reach New Peak Prices.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 2.—In spite of a late sell-off, the stock market managed to reach a higher level today and numerous issues advanced to new highs. Buying of stocks assumed a selective character, with gains in the rail equipment division running as high as 5 points.

Trading throughout the session was orderly, the market forging slowly ahead on a turnover of around 2,429,000 shares, or about the same as the previous day's dealings. Best prices in many instances were reached in the last hour under the stimulus of the injunction order restraining strikers from occupying two General Motors plants in Flint, Mich. Traders showed their satisfaction at the news by converting an early loss of more than a point in General Motors to a temporary gain of more than that.

General Motors Unchanged.

Late selling, however, pushed General Motors back to the previous closing price. Other motor stocks found good demand throughout the entire session on the realization that prolongation of the General Motors strike would send a good deal of car buyers to other makers. Chrysler finished with a gain of 3⅛ points after being up 4 points earlier, and good buying took place in Hudson, Studebaker, Mack, Auburn, and Nash-Kelvinator.

Steel shares could not be kept down. U. S. Steel was pushed ahead 2 points to a new high and finished a point higher than on Monday. Crucible was marked up 2½ points and Republic was in demand. Bethlehem worked a trifle lower.

On prospects of large orders from the railroads, rail equipment issues reached new highs. New York Airbrake leaped 5 points on a single sale and reports of a large order furnished the impetus for a gain of more than 3 points in Lima Locomotive. Marching in step, American Locomotive moved ahead 1¼ points, Pullman climbed 1½ and Westinghouse Airbrake spurted 2½.

Railway Issues Strong.

Carrier issues improved fractions to more than a point. Among the best were Great Northern, Louisville and Nashville, and Southern Railway. Utility shares plugged along without much fanfare.

Packing company shares improved, Armour being one of the most active stocks in the table. The rise was based on the prospects of relief orders from the flood area.

Mail orders, farm implements and fertilizers enjoyed a good market. Case registered an advance of 3 points and Deere climbed a point. Montgomery Ward and Sears-Roebuck each appreciated fractions.

The trading element seemed to be prejudiced in favor of the oils, a number of which established new highs, including Socony Vacuum, Texas corporation [on a gain of over 2 points] and Standard Oil of California.

Thompson Co. Profit Covers '36 Dividends

A large number of additional companies yesterday reported increased earnings in 1936 over the preceding year, including the John R. Thompson company, Butler Brothers, and Continental Baking corporation.

F. S. CUNNINGHAM.

While figures were not yet available for Thompson's, national restaurant chain, an official indicated that in the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1936, the company earned at least enough to cover the $150,000 in dividends paid on the capital stock. This would be the first profit for any full year since 1932. In 1935 the company had a loss of $48,169.

The company paid dividends throughout the depression years amounting to 12½ cents a quarter since May, 1934, and 25 cents quarterly prior to that.

Butler Brothers declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on common stock and the regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share on the 5 per cent $30 par preferred stock, both payable March 1 to stockholders of record Feb. 13. New York, Feb. 2.—Higher grade bonds today showed further improvement on the New York Stock exchange on a slightly heavier trading volume.

While mixed trends ruled among the secondary domestic corporate issues, the most conspicuous movements were on the upside with speculative interest centered on selected convertible industrial loans. Total transactions today amounted to $13,969,000, compared with $12,444,000 on Monday.

Ignore Rise in Bill Rates.

Trading in United States government obligations was moderate but the market again ignored the further increase in the average rate paid on discount bills this week. Gains in the federal list ranged from 1-32 to 8-32 of a point, with both the direct and guaranteed loans participating in the advance. Traders anticipate little change in the yields of the longer term obligations even though the higher reserve requirements may tend to further stiffen short term money rates.

Secondary railroad liens were in fairly good demand most of the day, while several of the higher grade rail issues responded to better buying with moderate gains.

Many Wide Gains Shown.

Strong individual features included the bonds of Botany Mills, Studebaker convertible 3s, Symington-Gould convertible 4s, United States Pipe and Foundry convertible 3½s, Youngstown Sheet and Tube convertible 3½s, and American Type Founders 2½s-5s, net gains in those issues ranging from 3 to 8 points.

Leaders among the rails included Atchison 4s, Missouri Pacific bonds, and issues of the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico.

Interlake Iron.

Investors' Guide: Please send me all the information you can concerning Interlake Iron.—M. R.

Answer: The Interlake Iron corporation is one of the largest independent producers of merchant pig iron and commercial coke in the United States. Its main sources of revenue are manufacturers in the automobile, railroad equipment, machinery, and agricultural implement lines. It has a production capacity of 1,204,500 tons of pig iron and 2,050,000 tons of coke.

Some diversification is obtained through sale of gas to utilities in Chicago, Toledo, Erie, and Duluth, where plants are located. Other major by-products are ammonium sulphate and coal tar.

The company has coal reserves estimated sufficient for twenty years' supply at full operations. It also appears assured of iron ore supply for a long period of years.

After five consecutive years of losses the company operated at a profit during the last half of 1936. Sales were $13,522,000 and net income was $68,000 in the first nine months of 1936, compared with sales of $10,724,000 and loss of $674,000 in the corresponding 1935 period. For the three months alone ended Sept. 30, 1936, net income was $99,000, against loss of $259,000 in the corresponding 1935 period. Net for all of 1936 has been estimated at approximately $600,000 in unofficial reports.

Losses amounted to $436,000 in 1935, $684,000 in 1934, $817,000 in 1933, $2,170,000 in 1932.

Capitalization consists of 2,000,000 shares of no par common stock carried on the books at $52,169,000. As a preliminary step to refunding outstanding funded debt, stockholders will be asked to approve reduction of the stated value of stock by approximately $8,169,000 at a special meeting on Feb. 11. Surplus thus created, together with part of existing capital surplus, would be used to write down book values of certain investments and other assets of the company and wipe out operating deficit resulting from losses in recent years.

The company proposes to issue $10,000,000 of debentures, offering stockholders first rights to subscribe. Proceeds would be used to retire $4,600,400 of By-Products Coke corporation first mortgage 5½s of 1945 and $4,129,500 of first mortgage 5s of 1951, and to compensate the company in part for funds used in retirement of $2,370,000 of 5½ per cent bonds of Zenith Furnace company, a subsidiary, on Jan. 1, 1937.

PRESIDENT CALLS ARGENTINE MEAT EMBARGO UNJUST

Declines to Tell What Action May Be Taken.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt today declined to state whether he plans to "turn on the heat" of his office to permit freer entry of Argentine beef into the country. The President was told that Senator Tom Connally [Dem., Tex.], representing the cattle country, who is opposed to lifting the sanitary restrictions against Argentine meat, has said that unless the President "put the heat on" there will be no lifting of the ban. He was then asked whether he proposed to turn on the heat.

Mr. Roosevelt said he felt the ban was unjust because all Argentine cattle are banned because of diseased cattle in a small section of the country.

Draws Parallel Here.

To bring the situation home, he continued, it would be like banning cattle from the northwest because there was a plague among cattle in the southeast. Let Tom Connally laugh that off, he concluded.

Mr. Roosevelt has openly favored lifting the sanitary ban since his return from his peace mission in Buenos Aires last December.

Cattle raisers and packers are firmly against letting down the bars on the ground that this country is already being flooded with meat from abroad, including pork and mutton from Argentina, because of the administration's enforced scarcity program.

Mr. Roosevelt said he is continuing his discussions on legislation concerning minimum wages, maximum hours, and child labor, but said that no concrete proposal has yet been evolved in conferences with administration leaders, business men, and labor leaders.

Plans Still Nebulous.

To date, he said, the plans under study have not gone into the incorporation of unfair trade practice regulations of the old NRA, but such regulation might become a question of policy after the three other features of the NRA were enacted into law.

He reported administration plans for taking a nation-wide census of the unemployed are assuming form, but he would give no indication as to when the census may be begun.

A laugh was his answer to reports about changes in his cabinet.

DROP IN INTEREST, DIVIDEND RETURN SEEN THIS MONTH

Interest and dividend payments to American investors this month will be smaller than last month or in February, 1936, according to a compilation of the New York Journal of Commerce. Refunding operations cutting down interest rates and the abnormally heavy dividend distributions during December to escape the tax on undistributed profits are the two factors held most responsible for the dip.

Total distributions are estimated at $276,240,000 this month, compared with $368,500,000 in February, 1936. Dividends to be paid total $120,350,000, against $139,500,000 a year ago, and $327,850,000 in January. Interest distributions are placed at $155,900,000 this month, compared with $240,900,000 in January, and $229,000,000 in February, 1936.

Railroad dividends this month are estimated at $10,000,000, or less than half of the amount paid a year ago.

Insull Holding Company Granted Tax Abatement

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The internal revenue bureau today abated a $1,202,053 claim for 1929 income taxes against Insull Utilities Investments, Inc., of Chicago. The bureau said it had determined the company was overassessed in this amount.

Favor Extending Federal Guarantee of FHA Bonds

Washington, D. C., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The senate banking committee approved a bill today to extend to July 1, 1939, the government's guarantee of debentures issued by the Federal Housing administration.

SUGAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was unchanged today at 3.68c per lb for spots, with no sales reported. There were additional offerings at this price, but refiners showed no further interest. The No. 4 was slightly lower throughout the session under commission house liquidation. No. 3 closed 1 to 2 points net lower, with sales of 10,000 tons. No. 4 closed unchanged to 1½ points lower, with May declining from 1.13½c to 1.12c and closing at 1.12½c and July from 1.16½c to close at 1.14½c. Sales were 14,700 tons.

FRENZIED TRADE IN COCOA MARKS COMMODITY BOOM

Price Breaks, Then Soars; Dealings Halted.

The speculative fever in cocoa—one of the market sensations of the commodity boom—yesterday reached a new pitch of frenzy which brought, first, a sharp break in prices, and then an equally steep rebound which carried quotations above Monday's level.

Trading on the New York Cocoa exchange was so heavy that it was necessary to suspend all business shortly before the noon hour to allow brokers to catch up on their transactions.

Cocoa for delivery next May fell ¾ of a cent a pound during the first half of the market session and then recovered all of its loss and closed 0.04 of a cent above Monday's price at 10.18 cents a pound.

Climax of Long Speculation.

The present furious activity in the market comes as the culmination of months of feverish speculation, which has been based in part on the rapidly gaining world consumption and the curtailed output of the principal producing countries last season. World consumption in 1936 was the greatest on record, while West Africa and Brazil, the principal producing countries, had less cocoa to sell.

Transactions in the futures market in the last two days have amounted to 50,000 tons.

Cottonseed oil was another of the day's chief performers in the commodity markets yesterday. Trading in the futures market broke all volume records with sales of 34,500,000 pounds reported. Final prices were 0.07 to 0.11 cent lower. The decline was attributed to the weakness in lard, a competitive product.

BUSINESS

The Electric Auto-Lite Company, incorporated in the State of Ohio on May 31, 1922, and its subsidiaries, manufacture, assemble and sell principally various motor vehicle accessories, such as starting, lighting and ignition units, storage batteries, lamps, instrument panels, aluminum and zinc base die castings, and wire and cable, and also a variety of miscellaneous products. The principal properties of the Company and its subsidiaries comprise sixteen plants, of which two are at present unoccupied. All but one of these plants are owned in fee (subject to certain liens, encumbrances and defects).

USE OF PROCEEDS

The net proceeds to be received by the Company from the sale of the Debentures, approximately $10,026,970, will be applied as follows: $4,934,600 to redeem at 110 on April 1, 1937 all outstanding Preferred Shares (accrued dividends to be paid out of other funds); approximately $2,000,000, to discharge unsecured current indebtedness to banks; and the balance, approximately $3,092,370, to be used for working capital, retiring in whole or in part secured funded indebtedness of subsidiaries, and other corporate purposes.

CAPITALIZATION

As of September 30, 1936, the Company had outstanding, exclusive of shares in treasury, 44,870 Preferred Shares, $100 par, 7% Cumulative, (100,000 shares authorized), and 1,193,355 Common Shares, $5 par, (1,500,000 authorized). 9,250 of the Common Shares held in treasury were reserved for officers and employees under options expiring July 1, 1937. 55,000 Preferred Shares will be authorized and unissued after the redemption of outstanding Preferred Shares as stated under "Use of Proceeds".

DEBENTURES

These Debentures will be limited in amount to $10,000,000, and issued under an Indenture dated as of February 1, 1937, between the Company and the Trustee, Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company.

COMMON SHARES

No dividends shall be paid upon the Common Shares while there exists any default in the payment of dividends on the Preferred Shares. The Company will covenant in the Indenture under which the Debentures are to be issued that so long as any of the Debentures are outstanding it will not pay any cash dividends, purchase or redeem shares of any class (other than the Preferred Shares outstanding at February 1, 1937) in excess of an amount equal to (a) consolidated net profits (as defined) earned after December 31, 1935, and (b) net proceeds of any securities issued after February 1, 1937 junior to the Debentures, other than shares issued upon conversion of the Debentures. The Common Shares have sole voting rights except upon default of eight consecutive quarterly Preferred dividends, when the Preferred shareholders shall be entitled, until dividends in arrears have been paid, to cast one vote for each share held, and to elect a majority of the Board of Directors. The liquidation rights of the Common Shares are subject to the prior right of the Preferred Shares to receive $110 per share on voluntary liquidation and $100 per share on involuntary liquidation, plus accrued dividends.

200,000 Common Shares are initially reserved for issue on conversion of the Debentures, the number required changing thereafter. Scrip certificates, void after February 1, 1948, will be issued in lieu of fractional Common Shares. The par or stated value of Common Shares issued on conversion is to be credited to capital account, and the excess of consideration received will be credited as determined by the Board of Directors or officers.

GRAINS REGAIN EARLY LOSSES; WHEAT IN LEAD

Oats and Rye Are Firmer; Corn Is Heavy.

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES

Yesterday's closing prices on grain for delivery in May, with comparisons, follow:

	Yesterday.	Mond.	Wk. ago.	Mo. ago.
Wheat	$1.28¼	$1.27⅞	$1.28¾	$1.32¾
Corn	1.05⅛	1.05⅛	1.09⅝	1.09¾
Oats	.49⅞	.49½	.50⅞	.52
Rye	1.10	1.09⅜	1.11	1.13
Soy beans	1.56¼	1.56	1.58	1.57¾

Grain markets yesterday reversed their action of the previous day, breaking sharply in the early trading, but rallying rapidly toward the close. Final sales were at the best prices of the day in wheat, oats, and rye. Wheat gained a cent a bushel, while oats and rye were up small fractions.

Corn showed a heavy undertone. While the May delivery was unchanged, the September future was ⅞ cent a bushel lower and sold at a new low for the season, touching 93¼ cents.

An early decline in wheat of a cent a bushel was a reflection of a break of nearly 2 cents in the Liverpool market and a slower English demand for cash wheat.

Small Holders Sell Wheat.

There was fairly persistent selling of wheat by many small holders of future contracts, but the aggregate trade was light. When professional traders who had sold on the decline attempted to cover their short sales they found offerings light and the later upturn was easily attained. The drastic decline in a number of other commodities and the strength in stocks were ignored as market influences.

There was nothing in the news to account for the late rally in the wheat market. Export demand was reported to be slow, although Italy was said to have purchased 1,120,000 bushels of cash wheat in Czechoslovakia on Monday and has lowered its import duty nearly 50 per cent.

Low Temperatures in West.

Relatively low temperatures prevailed in Kansas and Nebraska, preventing the thawing of the ice blanket which formed late last week over the wheat fields. The trade had reports of dust storms in the Syracuse, Kas., territory.

Commission house selling in small lots, said by brokers to represent liquidation by tired holders, was responsible for the decline in corn. A continued active shipping demand for cash corn at Chicago, sales being 85,000 bushels, was largely ignored as a market influence.

Strength in oats, rye, and soy beans was derived largely from sympathy with wheat.

GENERAL SELLING CARRIES LARD FUTURES LOWER

The large increase of 19,000,000 pounds of lard in stock at Chicago during January, as shown in an official report issued after trading ceased on Monday, caused general liquidation by holders of lard futures yesterday. Prices declined 27½ to 32½ cents to new low levels since late in November. May sold at $12.75, compared with $14.60 per 100 pounds at the high point in December.

Stocks of lard at seven leading western packing centers increased nearly 27,000,000 pounds in January, it was announced late yesterday by Lyman C. West, statistician for the Chicago Board of Trade. Aggregate supplies in cold storage Jan. 30 were 125,410,000 pounds, compared with 39,069,000 pounds a year ago. Stocks of all hog meats were 214,436,000 pounds, up 17,189,000 pounds in January, and compared with 150,616,000 pounds a year ago.

Clear bellies [salt pork] closed 10 to 17½ cents lower. Cash lard was quoted at $12.40; loose, $11.70; leaf, $11.50, and clear bellies at $15.62½ per 100 pounds. Prices follow:

COTTON HOLDS IN 50 CENT RANGE, BUT CLOSES LOWER

Cotton futures yesterday held within a range of 50 cents a bale. Prices declined early on scattered selling and less aggressive trade buying. There was some pressure on the July and October deliveries in New York and late in the session trade buying was evident, which resulted in a rally. The close in leading American markets was at net losses of .03 to .08 cents a pound.

Spot cotton closed .05 to .10 cents lower with New Orleans at 13.30 cents; New York, 13.25 cents; Houston 12.80 cents, and Galveston, 12.70 cents a pound. Prices follow:

U. S. BUYS BUTTER IN ATTEMPT TO BOLSTER PRICES

Heavy Purchase of Eggs Also Made.

The federal government, poultrymen's best customers since mid-January yesterday purchased 100 tubs, approximately 6,300 pounds, of butter in the New York market at 33½ cents a pound. No butter was purchased in Chicago, federal buyers said. This was the first purchase of butter by the government in its attempt to bolster prices.

Heavy buying of eggs continued here and in New York as the government took 229,500 dozen in the two markets. It paid 22¾ cents a dozen for one car of 12,000 dozen extra firsts, and 22½ cents a dozen for 48,000 dozen fresh graded firsts here. Reports at the Chicago Mercantile exchange indicated that total government purchase of eggs may have reached 2,526,500 dozen in the last two weeks.

Await Policy on Butter.

Whether the government's entry into the New York butter market yesterday signaled the inauguration of an extensive program designed to support butter prices was a matter of conjecture at the mercantile exchange.

Since early January this year wholesale prices of butter have tended downward under the influence of reduced consumer demand, heavy domestic production, foreign imports and large freezer holdings. Butter in storage is estimated to be 21,000,000 pounds greater than a year ago and Chicago wholesale quotations are about 10 cents a pound lower.

Butter futures on the Chicago Mercantile exchange closed irregular yesterday with the current delivery ⅝ cent higher at 31⅝ cents a pound and the November delivery in new low ground for the present contract at 29⅞ cents a pound. Sales of butter futures were 155 cars.

Eggs Move Lower.

Prices of fresh eggs were steady to ¼ cent a dozen lower, fresh firsts ranging from 22 to 22¾ cents. Egg futures were easier despite the government buying and closing prices down ⅛ to ¼ cent a dozen. Sales of egg futures were 44 cars.

A firm local cash market led to an early upward move in potato futures. Old March contracts rose 13 cents a hundred pounds to $3.90. New March contracts failed to hold an early gain and closed unchanged. First trades were made in April contracts at $3.85 a hundred pounds. This contract calls for delivery of Idaho russets grading U. S. No. 1 size A. Sales of potato futures were 19 cars.

UTILITIES POWER OFFICIALS SEEK TO KEEP CONTROL

Plea Is Taken Under Advisement.

A motion to continue the present management in possession of the Utilities Power and Light corporation, $400,000,000 public utility holding company, pending reorganization under section 77 B of the amended bankruptcy act, was taken under advisement yesterday by Federal Judge William H. Holly.

Judge Holly recently approved a voluntary petition filed on behalf of the company and authorized the present management to remain in possession of the company's assets pending a hearing as to whether it should remain permanently in charge or whether a trustee should be appointed.

Petition Supported.

Dwight H. Green, counsel for the company, asked the court that the management be continued in charge. He was supported by Weymouth Kirkland, representing a debenture holders' committee, who said that even if a superman was appointed trustee it would take him six months to familiarize himself with the details of the company's operations.

"We hope to have a plan of reorganization for presentation in much less than the six months," Kirkland said.

Attacks Jurisdiction.

Roy D. Keehn, counsel for Harley L. Clarke, who was ousted from the presidency of the company last year, sought leave to file a petition attacking the jurisdiction of the court in the voluntary petition. Judge Holly indicated that he will give a decision on all pending matters Feb. 9.

Kirkland disclosed at the hearing the formation of the debenture holders' committee had been made at the request of 39 per cent of the outstanding combined issues of the 5 and 5½ per cent debentures of Utilities Power.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Cottonseed oil futures registered the highest turnover on record today. Contracts changing hands amounted to 609, which included 8 switches. The market was weak under renewed liquidation and commission house selling encouraged by the increase in lard stocks, easiness of lard, lower cotton and easier tallow and greases. There were partial recoveries from the lowest, with the market closing 7 to 11 points net down. There was considerable undoing of spreads by purchases of cotton oil against sales of cotton for European interests.

PLAY DEPICTS BUTLER BROS. STORE OF 1877

In celebration of its 60th anniversary, Butler Brothers, wholesale merchandising concern, gave a play yesterday in its store at Randolph and Canal streets to entertain delegates to the Interstate Merchants' council, now meeting at the Hotel Sherman. As a background the original Butler Brothers' store as it stood in Boston in 1877 was portrayed. Actors wore costumes of that day. Then fashions in vogue at various periods since that time, including late 1937 fashions, were modeled by co-eds from Northwestern university.
